'King of the Safecrackers'

First Blast Almost Ends New Career

(The author, a Canadian who from being a minister of the Gospel became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, now lives quietly, having paid for his years of wrongdoing, right among us on Vancouver Island. He was not alone as a criminal, and yesterday's chapter told of the people he gathered about him to make up his very special mob.)

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

(Copyright, Canada 1955, by Herbert Emerson Wilson and The Daily Colonist.)

I had my mob lined up. I was almost ready to hit the first mark—but not quite.

Back in Detroit, I rented a house on Cadillac Avenue, bought a secondhand safe for $50 and had it hauled up to my garage.

With the old-time petermen of my mob advising me, I began experimenting on that safe with my father's nitroglycerin formula. This proved to be touchy work, for I had no idea how much of the stuff to use. I learned later that different quantities of soup had to be used on different makes of safe, even if they were the same size and weight.

After a month or two, the old safe was almost unrecognizable and I had enough confidence in my new career to make a start.

That start was almost my finish, too.

Just for a test, Lou, Cox and I tackled the safe in a small dairy not far from the house we'd rented.

Apparently I used just a touch too much soup on the small safe, and next thing we knew all the glass partitions in the dairy came down around us in a tinkling crash.

We left promptly and without a cent—and my brother Lou was inclined to be a bit sarcastic about the whole thing.

Our next score proved a different story—perhaps because we applied to it all our knowledge and experience, and pulled it off in a style that was painstaking, exact in detail and, evidently, unique with my mob.

Our mark this time was a big downtown Detroit department store. Herb Cox had given it a preliminary casing, and assured me it would be easy. We set to work.

Herb got a job as an electrician in the store, and within a few days was able to tell me all about the 25 burglar-alarm bells guarding the place. Lou and Doc Redding paid daily shopping and change-making visits to the store, keeping their eyes open and asking casual questions around the cashier's office. It's astonishing how careless some people are.

Herb learned the name of the night watchman, and Lou paid him a visit, posing as an information gatherer for the city directory. Lou, of course, knew what questions to ask and comments to make, and in no time had the watchman telling him just how he worked—that he, for example, had to ring in his time boxes every hour on the half-hour, while the beat cop dropped in every hour on the hour.

For two more weeks after Lou's talk with the watchman, we cased the store thoroughly, by day and night. Then we held a dress rehearsal, complete with a stop watch and test of the getaway route—everything, that is, but the actual score.

Next night we struck.

Gun Is Our Key

At five minutes to one in the morning, Lou was crouched in a darkened doorway. Along came the beat cop and, before he could get his hands out of his pockets (it was bitterly cold) to ring the night bell, Lou had a gun in his back.

The cop, no fool, obeyed Lou's orders, rang the bell and told the watchman he was coming in with a friend.

Down the street Herb Cox, de la Pena and I were watching from a darkened car. As Lou made his move, we pulled up and, leaving Dave outside, Herb and I moved into the store with Lou and the cop.

Moving fast, we fronted the watchman before he could open his mouth. By 1 a.m. the cop, under Lou's gun, was making his routine check-in phone call, the watchman was handcuffed to a big chair, Herb was breaking the alarm circuit surrounding the safe, and I was getting out my tool-bag, and pulling on a pair of gloves.

This safe posed no big problem. There was felt padding between the door and the jamb, which I ate out with a syringeful of sulphuric acid.

Then Herb and I kneaded brown soap to a doughy consistency, and stuffed it like putty into the chinks.

In the soap, midway of the cracks at top and bottom of the safe door, I carved hollows about an inch deep and two inches long. From the rubber cork of the rubber nitroglycerin bag strapped to my shoulder I extracted about half an ounce of soup with a hypo.

With Herb watching the bottom cup, I let this go, drop by drop, into the top soap cup. In a minute or two he whispered "Hold it. It's hit bottom."

He flattened the bottom cup to keep the soup from running out, and after applying a detonator cap I did the same to the top. From the cap wires I ran about 20 feet of extension wire to the other side of the room.

From our bags we got two old-fashioned comforters, soaked them under a tap, and wrapped them around the safe.

We were almost ready for the blow—but first had to make sure there would be no interruptions from the outside.

Week-Long 'War' Ends

Final assault by government troops yesterday virtually ended the fighting in Costa Rica. Loyalists captured the last two rebel bases in the north and claimed to have caught "a fat fish"—perhaps Capt. Teodor Picado, Jr., son of an exiled ex-president and second-in-command of the rebels. Top photo shows National Guardsmen setting up machine-gun position. Canada To Start Flights On Polar Route to Europe

Will Shorten Trip By 1,000 Miles

Canada's first trans-polar air service will be in operation early in May.

The federal government has approved Canadian Pacific Airlines' application to route mail and passenger flights from Vancouver to Amsterdam, over the top of the world.

G. W. G. McConachie, president of the CPA, made the announcement last night.

"We are delighted that the cabinet has recognized the significance of this newest travel route to Europe," he said.

"We are fully aware of the responsibility involved in developing this important and strategic service for Canada."

RANK WITH BEST

"We propose," he added, "to devote our best efforts toward providing a high standard of operation that will reflect credit on this country and will compare favorably with any other in the world."

Simultaneously with the CPA announcement, came a statement from Transport Minister Marler.

The proposed route, he said, would cut by about 1,000 miles the regular flying distance between Vancouver and Europe.

CPA is not the pioneer of the route. Scandinavian Airlines recently started a flight schedule between Copenhagen and Los Angeles, by way of Winnipeg.

FORMAL APPROVAL

Only formality in the way of a license for CPA now is approval by the air transport board at Ottawa.

The 4,825-mile polar route from Vancouver to The Netherlands is expected to be flown in two stages, with a refueling stop at a Greenland base.

CPA says that at no time during the 17 hours of flying time required for the voyage would the airliners be more than 90 minutes from one or another of a chain of northern airports.

SHORTER HOPS

Each of the two non-stop legs will be shorter than the 3-180-mile span between Honolulu and Fiji which CPA flies regularly on its trans-Pacific run.

Amsterdam was chosen as the European terminus because it is equidistant from the principal cities of Europe and passengers in transit do not require customs or immigration clearances.

Initially CPA will schedule only a weekly return flight, leaving Vancouver Friday and arriving at Amsterdam 18 hours and 30 minutes later. A refueling stop might be made at Churchill, Man., if not in Greenland.

GREENLAND STOP

Westbound flights definitely will refuel at Sonderstrom, Greenland, however. These flights will leave Amsterdam Saturday evening, arriving in Vancouver Sunday.

CPA will use Super DC-6B aircraft on this route.

Connections will be made in Vancouver with air services to Australia, New Zealand and the Far East.

There will be first-class and tourist accommodation and services, with "epicure meals" for the more expensive passage.

Desperate Convicts Surrender Meekly

BOSTON (AP)—Four long-term convicts, who held five guards hostage in Massachusetts state prison for 3½ days in a desperate try for freedom, surrendered meekly Friday to a seven-man civilian committee.

The committee, through its spokesman, Erwin D. Canham, editor of The Christian Science Monitor, said no "bargain or deal" was made.

The convicts were promised only that everything will be done to work with state officials "to get something so that these convicts would have some hope for the future."

The four, who had offered to trade the lives of their hostages for a getaway car and a clear path to freedom, gave up their pistols and knives and released the guards and six other prisoners who were held against their wishes in the solitary cell block of the antiquated 150-year-old prison. None were harmed.

The men are Theodore (Teddy) Green, bank robber and jail breaker; Walter Balben, robber-gunman; rapist Joseph Flaherty, and police killer Fritz Swenson. The hostages were served hot meals daily with the acquiescence of their captors. The prisoners themselves had a limited amount of food in the solitary cell block kitchen. The siege ended just short of 82 hours.

The outburst started early Tuesday when the four convicts sawed their way out of their cells and seized the guards after failing to escape with the aid of a makeshift ladder.*

The rebels made things quite comfortable for the committee during the negotiations. Canham said when the committee members arrived at the cell block where the convicts were holed, "We found a most amazing scene—11 chairs in a neat circle with a table in the centre and a pad and pencils—facilities for a well-organized conference."

The tenseness of the situation was graphically summed up by Canham as he described the exact moment of the disarming.

"Until the precise moment when they pulled their guns from their dungarees pockets and tossed them on the table before us, we did not know whether the men would choose tragedy or hope.

"We had talked, back and forth, for some six hours to try and bring them to choose hope."

Government Fumbles One?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Directors of the Vancouver Tourist Association are convinced the provincial government has fumbled one.

Object of their scorn is the 1955 B.C. license plate which replaces steel tabs issued for several years. The 1955 plate is an indeterminate yellow, according to some members, lacking symbol or slogan.

Tiny Bodies Found, Woman Charged

EDMONTON (CP)—Charges of manslaughter and infanticide were laid Friday against an Edmonton woman following discovery of two babies' bodies in the cellar of a downtown rooming house. Police said the babies had been dead for five or six years.

Anne Drobot, also known as Anne Devon, appeared in court on the charges and was remanded without plea to Jan. 27.

The rooming house landlady found the two bodies in a cardboard box. Police said both infants apparently died soon after birth.

Police said one child was believed born between February and August, 1948, and the other between August and November, 1949. They said the manslaughter charge was laid in connection with the death of the first baby and the infanticide charge in connection with the death of the other. Infanticide carries a maximum penalty of three years.

An autopsy will determine the cause of death.

Police said Miss Drobot has an eight-month-old child who has been placed in a home.

Aircraft Carriers Head for Formosa

TAIPEI, Saturday (UP) — Three U.S. aircraft carriers were reported steaming today toward the Formosa area, where Nationalist and Communist forces were battling along a 300-mile stretch of Chinese coastal waters.

The 33,100-ton Essex, Kearsarge and Yorktown, each fitted to carry 100 planes, left Manila on the way to "exercises" in this trouble zone.

The report followed the disclosure that American advisers had left the invasion-threatened Tachens, at the north end of the battle line. High sources reported the Nationalists might abandon the strategic islands as indefensible without U.S. air and naval support.

The U.S. officers and men narrowly escaped death by Communist bombs on their way to Formosa after a "difficult" withdrawal from Tachen Island at night aboard a junk to a waiting warship.

The Nationalist air force reported it sank two Communist gunboats, destroyed 20 other vessels and damaged another 40 in sweeping raids all along the coast Friday.

INVASION FORCES MASS

Communist bombers swept at will over Tachen, dropping leaflets calling for "surrender or death." Invasion forces were massed both north and south of the island cluster.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek called his aides into emergency conferences on the fate of the Nationalist outpost islands along the coast.

Gen. William Chase, chief of the military advisory mission, met with Nationalist defense authorities and with U.S. ambassador Karl Rankin. Rear Admiral Roscoe Goode, U.S. deputy chief of naval logistics, talked for hours with Chiang.

Red China reported that Nationalist and "U.S." planes (the Nationalists fly many American-made planes) raided the mainland port city of Foochow Thursday, killing 120 civilians and destroying many houses.

A high American source suggested that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's regime had approached U.S. authorities in Washington about the evacuation of the Tachens.

FIGHT TO END

However, a Nationalist military spokesman said there was no plan to evacuate any island outposts. He added the Nationalists would fight to the last man on each, as they did on tiny Yikiangshan, just north of Tachen.

The high U.S. source said the Nationalists had renewed here their desperate appeals that American sea-air forces go to the defense of the Tachens.

The source sketched a gloomy picture of the Tachens situation, and voiced doubt that the 10,000-man Nationalist garrison could hold the islands against overwhelming Communist air power.

Ford Talks Continuing

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiators for Ford of Canada and United Automobile Workers' Union (CIO-CCL) adjourned their strike-settlement talks Friday night until this afternoon.

Both sides declined comment on the 2½-hour meeting in a hotel conference room.

Chisholm's Views on Faith Stir Up New Tempest

BY R. O. MARRION

Comments of Dr. Brock Chisholm on recent BBC talks in which existence of God has been denied, and which have started a religious controversy in Britain, last night put him in the centre of a local storm.

Dr. Chisholm, psychiatrist and former head of the World Health Organization, now living at Otter Point, was quoted yesterday as saying belief in God under present doctrinal concepts is "irrational."

Later, he denied that this had been the intent of his remarks.

"I said that people who have one faith tend to regard other faiths as irrational," he said. "Faith and rationality are in different fields.

"It isn't possible to examine the validity of a faith by a rational approach, because they are in different fields.

"A faith is called a faith when it is independent of rational approach, which is not to say that any faith is irrational."

(Dean P. R. Beattie of Christ Church Cathedral characterized this as "a Brock Chisholm definition.")

Dr. Chisholm said that mixing faith with an intellectual approach to religion generally was bound to make personality difficulties.

For sound emotional development, he said, a knowledge of all the major religions was necessary, or at least a knowledge of their "valid existence."

He added later, "I do believe children should be taught of the existence of a variety of different religions, so that they may understand how people behave all over the world."

Dr. Chisholm said that in today's society, religion was of a cultural importance and children could not develop to fit into this society without roots in religion.

The doctor also said that over the centuries the concept of God has been translated in line with "the people's own attitude." The retranslation of the role of God fell to the prophets, "of whom Christ was the greatest," he said.

DR. BROCK CHISHOLM
. . . Two Different Fields

Dean Beattie, as well as arguing that Dr. Chisholm was basing his views on his own definitions of faith and rationality, also took issue with the doctor's opinion that children should be taught about other religions.

"By the same token doctors should study what witch doctors do, in order to practice scientific medicine," he said.

Dean Beattie added that he didn't know what good it would do children to know such things as animism.

"If you have a refrigerator you don't need a root cellar," he declared.

Rev. W. W. McPherson of Oak Bay United Church took a different view of children learning about other religions, siding more with Dr. Chisholm. He said he thought children who were of mature mind should study other religions so they could understand the ways of other people, "but not in their early years when they are impressionable."

"Christianity has nothing to lose by comparison," Dr. McPherson said.

Rev. J. E. Smith of Emmanuel Baptist Church said some of the finest theologians of modern times favored a rational approach to religion.

"I don't think Dr. Chisholm's statements will hurt the faith too much," he said. "He can't even destroy Santa Claus. How can he destroy God?"

Mr. Smith quoted from C. S. Lewis that "the finest piece of scientific reasoning is caused in just the same irrational way as the thoughts a man has because a bit of bone is pressing on his brain."

"Really," Mr. Smith said, "Dr. Chisholm's rationality seems no saner or sounder than the rational ideas of the supernaturalist who worships God as a personal power outside of nature."

Eskimo Hunters Back After Ice Pack Ordeal

OTTAWA (CP)—Nine Eskimo seal hunters, hope for their survival all but given up, have returned safely to their village 17 days after they were marooned on an ice pack in cold, foggy Hudson Bay.

The men returned to their families Thursday night, only hours after the RCAF, with RCMP approval, had called a halt to an aerial search that had failed to turn up a trace of the hunters.

The Eskimos, cast adrift Jan. 4 when a chunk of shore ice broke away as they hunted off Cape Smith Island, close to the bay's northeastern coast, apparently were still in good shape after days of exposure to bitter wind and temperatures ranging to 30 below.

RCAF search and rescue headquarters at Halifax, which had sent three planes to search for the marooned hunters, received the first message that the men "walked home" to Povungnituk, their village.

A similar message from RCMP Constable J. E. Decker at Port Harrison, Que., reached Supt. H. A. Larsen of the RCMP here a short time later.

Supt. Larsen, a veteran of the north who skippered the RCMP ship St. Roch on its Northwest Passage voyages, radioed back for more details on how the men survived on an ice pack believed only about four inches thick.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

WE stood in one of those bay-window offices of the Belmont Building, above the harbor and the streets.

"Bet I could do twice the work, in a glass tower up in the sky like this," I said. Whata bright change it was from the black walls and the blinking teletype machines.

Here, a man could look beyond his typewriter at gulls, ships, cars, people, green grass and buildings, and the sea.

"It's a fine view," I said.

"Yes," acknowledged my friend, "it's too bad to waste it on civil servants." He is a civil servant himself.

* * *

True enough, I said. Civil servants would be too busy to look at it.

Not always, my friend replied. Although civil servants were an industrious bunch, he was forced to admit that they stole a look out the window now and then.

"How do you suppose the masters of the CPR and Black Ball vessels could get out of the harbor, if they didn't have us to help them?" he demanded.

And he introduced me to a colleague of his in an adjoining office, who does most of the pilotage work for the Belmont Building, with the able assistance of several others.

* * *

As luck would have it, this man was directing a ship out of the harbor at that very moment.

"Put your helm hard to starboard," he snapped, taking in the situation at a glance without stirring from his desk. It was a tense moment.

"No, no, you fool, I didn't say FULL astern," he said, half-rising from his chair. Look out, look OUT! You'll ram the dock."

"Must be difficult for him to hear the orders, through a wall and 300 yards of empty air," I said. But my friend was too preoccupied to pay any attention.

"Hard over, hard over," he shouted. "Thank goodness, he's done it." He mopped his brow. "Phew," he said. "That was touch and go for a while."

* * *

"I suppose you civil servants handle the bulk of this remote-control pilotage work," I said.

"Oh, no, the boys in the commercial offices, and the staff and guests at the Empress Hotel give us some useful help," he said. "Easy, now, mister. Just ease her around a couple of points, and then that so'west wind will catch her in the quarter, and swing her the rest of the way. That's the style, now."

His cold grey eyes, the eyes of a man accustomed to looking into great distances, followed the ship as she lumbered from the harbor.

"Neat work," he observed, "if I do say so myself."

Then he scooped a file from the "pending" basket, and turned his cold grey eyes on that.

* * *

"What about that Chinook fiasco?" I demanded shrewdly. "The time she ran aground?"

"We're holding a court of inquiry on that in coffee break tomorrow," he said. "But I'm in the clear. It's the boss's responsibility, not mine."

"What's your appointment?"

He brought down an old peaked cap from a peg. It had a cardboard panel on the front of it. Marked upon the cardboard in home-made letters were the words "Assistant Deputy Harbormaster."

Unit To Get New Chief

A new commander of 25 Militia Group in Victoria will be named shortly to replace Brigadier Larry Henderson, who is leaving Victoria for Vancouver to accept a business promotion.

Brigadier Henderson will leave here February 1, but he will continue to return to Victoria once or twice a week to carry out his militia duties, until he is replaced.

He was appointed to command the new militia group and promoted from lieutenant colonel to brigadier on November 10 of last year.

Belmont Opened

Students in B.C. are of a higher calibre than anywhere else in Canada, H. L. Campbell, deputy minister of education, said at the opening of the new $534,000 Belmont Junior Senior High School last night.

Mr. Campbell said that more students went on to high school and university in B.C. than in other provinces. "Ours are better than the best and the average is better than the average of the world," he stated.

Among those attending the ceremonies was 87-year-old Robert Whitty, the first student at the old Metchosin School.

Monetary Theories Attacked

Social Credit monetary theories were attacked by Mrs. Percy Rayment at a meeting of the Langford CCF Club.

"When in the hungry '30's Major Douglas appeared before a commission to propose a solution to the conditions which prevailed he was asked to explain how credit issues were to be paid," she said.

"His reply was that it will liquidate itself," Mrs. Rayment continued.

"To anyone who has studied finance, that is a ridiculous statement," she claimed. "Continuous issue of currency to the banks if not redeemed would result eventually in drastic inflation and subsequent national ruin, as was the case in Germany after the First World War," she said.

Motorists in New York state pay more than $410,000,000 a year in automobile insurance premiums.

Is Canada Too Big For Its Breeches? Tory Believes So

OTTAWA (CP) — A Quebec Progressive Conservative Friday suggested that Canada is "getting too big for its breeches" in world affairs.

Leon Balcer (Trois-Rivieres) asked whether the government is letting itself be carried away by its ideas of grandeur and whether this might lead the country into economy-draining responsibilities.

He was one of several speakers in the continuing Commons debate on ratification of the Paris agreements for entry of a rearmed West Germany into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The agreements limit German arms and military manpower.

The agreements still must be approved by some NATO members — including Canada — and West Germany before German admittance to the alliance. A vote, originally expected Friday, now is not likely before next week.

NEGATIVE VOTES

Four CCF members have said they will vote against ratification. They are Stanley Knowles, Winnipeg North Centre, who spoke Thursday night; Joseph W. Noseworthy, York South; R. R. Knight, Saskatoon, and H. W. Herridge, Kootenay West. Another member of the party, Alistair Stewart, Winnipeg North, said he will abstain.

The main point advanced by those favoring ratification, including Health Minister Martin, was that the stronger the West is the better able it will be to bargain with the East.

All Liberal, Progressive Conservative and Social Credit members who entered the debate supported ratification.

Band Here Today

The 42-member PPCLI army band from Calgary will arrive in Victoria at 2.30 p.m. today and will be quartered at Work Point Barracks.

The band will give a public concert at Bay Street Armory at 2.30 p.m. Sunday and will play for the Work Point garrison on Monday at 7.30 p.m. in the radar building.

The band will also play at the opening of the provincial legislature next Tuesday.

The army will turn out a 100-man guard for the House opening. It will be commanded by Major R. A. McAlpine of the 4 Light Anti-Aircraft Battery and a troop of four guns under Capt. John Reeves of the 119 Medium Anti-Aircraft Battery will fire a 19-gun salute when the lieutenant-governor arrives at the legislative buildings at 2.45 p.m.

Two Plead Guilty; Remanded

Two men pleaded guilty in city court yesterday to charges arising from a recent break-in at Northern Electric Company and theft of about $1,500 worth of goods.

Vernon Reid, 32, and Joseph Fraser, 19, both of 1619 Quadra Street, were remanded until Wednesday for probation reports.

Fraser pleaded guilty to possession of stolen goods, including three radios and two electric shavers; Reid to breaking and entering and theft.

About half the stolen loot has been recovered.

Parade Participation By City Firms Aim

The Chamber of Commerce will undertake to organize participation of business firms in Victoria's Empire Day parade.

This decision was made at a meeting of chamber directors yesterday at which they also went on record as favoring the parade date for Saturday, May 21.

Next step will be up to the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association which asked the chamber to organize the parade and to give an opinion on the suggestion of the Saturday date.

It is considered almost certain the parade will be held on the Saturday. If so, it will be the first time the procession has been held on an ordinary business day.

Stores would close by mutual agreement during the time of the parade.

BAND TOGETHER

It was proposed that where it was found too expensive for one firm to enter a float, a group of firms might band together, according to their business or their location.

It was suggested that the parade be organized around some central topic.

The ways and means committee of the chamber was empowered to appoint a sub-committee to develop the chamber's part in the parade.

The chamber will support the application of Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd. to operate a service from Patricia Bay.

It was decided to send a delegation from the chamber to sit in on the public hearing of the Air Transport Board to be held here January 28.

Load Falls, Tie-Up Hits Area Cars

A chain holding a lumber load on the tractor-trailer of John K. Rant, 294 Bessborough, broke at Admirals and Craigflower roads at 3 p.m. yesterday, spilling lumber from the tractor. Traffic was slowed for two hours, RCMP said.

In Oak Bay, the car of Peter Poy, 2516 Douglas, was struck on one fender by a hit-and-run car while parked on Beach Drive.

One man was injured in three city accidents.

Stephen Fairbanks, 3132 Donald, was in good condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital last night after suffering shock and hand injuries when his car collided with a truck driven by Kenneth Gill, 280 Balmoral, at Government and Bay.

Two cars received slight damage in a collision at Yates and Quadra, and a motorist found paint scratches on a fender when he returned to his car, parked on Yates, near Quadra.

Donations to the TB Christmas seal campaign in Greater Victoria have reached $17,156, close to the 1954 total of $17,500, officials of the Soroptimist Club said yesterday.

The 1954 figure, a record, is expected to be surpassed before the drive ends February 28. Contributions may be sent to the Christmas Seal campaign office, Room 14, 749 Broughton.

Check List For Liming

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

One question which seems to bother a lot of novice gardeners is when and how to apply a dressing of lime.

The safest and best way is to have your soil tested, so that you will know for sure just how much lime is required to bring your soil up to average good growing condition. Failing this, it is reasonably safe to give the whole vegetable and flower garden one cupful of ground limestone every third year. Don't go messing around the shrubs, though—there are too many touchy subjects which hate lime among the shrubs.

Even with this normal dressing, however, there are some flowers which bloom better when their beds are limed more often. Here, for quick reference, is a list of the more common lime-lovers for summer display:

Sweet Peas: In addition to the treatment every third year with ground limestone, sweet peas are helped if the site is given a dressing of half a cupful of hydrated lime in March. Use the hydrated rather than the ground limestone in this case, as the pulverized lime rock works too slowly to help the current crop.

Dianthus: Members of this family vary in their lime requirements, but pinks insist on a full cupful of hydrated lime per square yard each spring. Carnations will take about half this amount, and sweet williams can use ¾ cup to advantage.

Canterbury Bells: These are biennials, and remain in the same bed for two years, so use the long-lasting ground limestone, applying one cupful per square yard to the surface and scratching it in before bedding out the plants. The perennial peach-leafed bellflower, campanula persicafolia, will take half this amount, scratched in around the plant every spring.

Mignonette: The commonest causes of failure with this plant are loose soil and lack of lime. Rake in one cupful of hydrated per square yard before sowing, and make the soil very firm.

Gentians: Gentian acaulis often fails for lack of lime, and needs half a cupful of the ground limestone per square yard annually, applied in early spring. Most of the other members of the gentian family are lime-haters.

Iris: The bearded irises are great lime-lovers and can use 1¼ cups of ground limestone per square yard, applied just after flowering. Give the bulbous kinds half a cupful in August.

Gypsophila: Both the annual and perennial kinds require lots of lime. Give the annuals half a cupful of hydrated when preparing the bed, and scratch in a cupful of the ground kind around the perennials.

Scabious: Annual scabious need ¾ cupfuls of hydrated per square yard applied in the spring, while the perennial kind will take the same amount of ground limestone.

Young Driver Really Puts Foot in It

A squad of policemen, called to a Victoria home by reports of a prowler in the basement garage last night, found two surprised young men and their car instead.

John Nillberg, 18, 707 Blanshard, told police he had turned into the driveway of the home of Mrs. Francis Venables, 310 Dallas, to turn his car around, and had stepped on the gas instead of the brake.

The car came to rest shortly after it pushed open the garage doors, and Nillberg and his passenger, Peter Leesman, 18, 1875 Christie Way, were not hurt.

Giraffes, because of their poorly developed voices, communicate with each other mainly by switching their tails.

Last Gorge For Deforge

WINDOOSKI, Vt. (AP) — Dewey Deforge, who several years ago put away 27 "hot dogs" on a bet, choked to death eating one last night. The 54-year-old Deforge, who weighed 300 pounds, died within a few seconds after the frankfurter lodged in his throat.

New Quota For Herring

Migration of a large body of herring through Johnstone Strait has allowed a further extension of 10,000 tons in the herring quota for the middle east coast sub-district on Vancouver Island, the fisheries department said yesterday.

The quota now has been extended to 25,000 tons and new fishing will be opened at 2 p.m. Sunday. It will be restricted to waters north and west of Seymour Narrows.

From Prince Rupert it was reported yesterday a fleet of 40 seiners has made a rich harvest of 10,000,000 pounds of herring worth $150,000 in two days of steady fishing.

Fliers' Families Face Dilemma

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state department indicated Friday—without definitely saying so—that the U.S. government will not stand in the way of any Americans who want to visit relatives held in Communist Chinese prisons.

A department spokesman, press officer Henry Suydam, could not encourage the visits. He denounced the Reds for thrusting a "harrowing dilemma" upon American families, who apparently must decide for themselves whether to risk the long trip behind the Iron Curtain.

The Red invitation, which also was announced by the United Nations in New York, was extended to relatives of 17 Americans captured during the Korean war, including 11 U.S. airmen recently sentenced to long prison terms as spies.

The parents of at least one American airman and the wife of another announced they would accept the offer, but most of the other relatives interviewed held back for one reason or another.

"An appallingly callous propaganda gesture," was the way Sen. Charles Potter (R.-Mich.) described it. Other senators expressed similar views.

The United Nations looked more favorably on the offer, which it said resulted from the recent trip to Peiping of Secretary-General Dag Mammarskjold, who sought the release of the American prisoners.

A UN spokesman said Hammarskjold "has no doubt about the safety of those members of the families wishing to visit China to see their men."

The Peiping announcement apparently was timed by prearrangement with UN headquarters in New York. The defense department sent out notices to the relatives Thursday night, in time to reach them before the announcement was made.

South Africa Moves To Trim Colored Rights

CAPE TOWN (AP)—Prime Minister Johannes Strijdom's government embarked Friday on a new campaign to curb the authority of South Africa's courts over parliament and trim the voting rights of 50,000 colored (mixed blood) voters in Cape province.

The government's program—including proposals for even tighter racial segregation controls—was disclosed at the opening of the third session of the union's 11th parliament.

The Nationalist party, which Strijdom leads, has been trying for more than two years to cut the voting rights of the coloreds. They have proposed the colords be limited to sending four representatives to parliament. Their vote now affects eight seats.

Dangerous, Says Coldwell

Liberal Spokesman Defends Quebec Deal

WINNIPEG (CP)—President Duncan K. MacTavish of the National Liberal Federation Friday night defended the federal government's announced intention to have parliament cut personal income taxes for Quebec taxpayers.

Prime Minister St. Laurent has "rendered a great service to the country in working for a solution to a sensitive problem," he told the Manitoba Liberal-Progressive Association.

Mr. St. Laurent Monday announced a two-year, 10-per-cent personal income tax reduction for Quebec.

Mr. MacTavish said:

"The taxpayers of Quebec, who have lost at least an average of from $40,000,000 to $45,000,000 annually in the years 1947-53 for provincial services because their government, as was its right, refused to enter into a tax agreement with the federal government, will get some relief.

"But the federal tax law will remain uniform throughout the country, and the provincial and federal authorities now will prepare for another conference."

In Ottawa, CCF leader M. J. Coldwell said the tax-reduction plan will be "a serious blow to national unity."

He said a departure from the principle that federal income tax should apply equally to all Canadians is "dangerous to national unity."

A Calculated Risk

HON. LESTER PEARSON argued strongly in the House of Commons for ratification of the Paris agreement allowing Germany to rearm and enter the NATO defensive alliance. The mood of all parties is such that parliamentary approval is likely without much dissent. Restoration of sovereignty to West Germany could not be forever denied and the West needs German manpower to offset the Soviet threat. Not to ratify the agreement would simply play into the hands of Russia, which would like nothing better—and as the external affairs minister pointed out is striving might and main to achieve—than rejection of the Paris plan.

The situation has to be faced realistically, however. The rearmament of West Germany is a calculated risk. That and the restoration of sovereignty is to win it solidly to the side of the western allies rather than allow it to fall victim to Soviet manoeuvre and influence. The defense of all Europe hinges considerably on West Germany bearing a share of the military burden and being ready to play an assigned defensive role. It is a key state which cannot be left as a vacuum but instead must be brought into the comity of the western alliance. If left outside it would eventually go its own way—undoubtedly with its own form of rearmament—and that way would not likely be the western way.

There is no need to paint West Germany as the abode of angels, however. Mr. Pearson says Canadians are deluding themselves if they think West Germany is a nation of militarists, which seems to be stretching the argument rather far. No doubt many Germany, like most people in free nations, dislike the necessity of rearmament but the actions of some others scarcely indicate they have learned a lesson from the last war. Germany has a long tradition of aggressive military action; three times in living memory she has invaded France, hence that country's misgivings even while approving the Paris agreement.

These are facts which obtrude notwithstanding the wisdom of West German entry into the NATO set-up. It is better to have the Bonn republic on the roster of the west than of the east, and that she should rearm within the compass and restriction of the proposed terms. A West German concert with the allies may also induce a less belligerent native frame of mind, a softening of the arrogance which made her an uneasy European neighbor. Nevertheless many competent observers view the matter with some disquiet and there is no use pretending otherwise. The west has little choice but to enlist West Germany via the grant of sovereignty and rearmament but of itself this does not make the arrangement too palatable. The factual threat of Soviet Russia is greater than a potential threat from a rearmed West Germany; that is the criterion.

Lack of Uniformity

ANYONE who follows the police court reports from various points on Vancouver Island must be struck by the absence of anything resembling uniformity in fines imposed for traffic offenses of the same general type. Here are some examples taken from recent reports of cases heard by magistrates in three different Island centres:

A lawyer charged with driving at 90 miles an hour was fined $20 and costs. A sailor paced at 40 miles an hour was fined $40. Another motorist whose speed was given as 75 miles an hour was fined $30. In all three cases apparently speed was the only element involved; there were no accidents. Perhaps there were mitigating circumstances not noted in the bare reports of the ingredients of the charges and the fines levied. Even so it is incongruous that speeding at 90 miles an hour should be punished by a nominal fine of $20 in one city and that another driver appearing in a different court only a few miles distant should be fined twice as much for driving at less than half that speed. The disparity is too marked to pass without comment.

Speeding is a serious offense because of its capacity for great harm to others. By contrast with the $20 fine on the lawyer who drove at 90 miles an hour, the same court levied one of $25 on a youth of 21 for the technical offense of driving without a valid license. His apparently was not an aggravated offense. He had possessed a minor's license but neglected to take out an adult license on attaining his majority shortly before his apprehension. It would be hard to say that his infraction was comparable with that of the lawyer.

Authority to determine the degree of punishment deserved is vested in the magistrates, and always should be. It is for that reason that the statutes do not fix arbitrary fines but allow wide latitude between established minimums and maximums, so that the court may adjust punishment to circumstances. In matters like simple cases of speeding, uncomplicated by other factors, however, it should be possible in a province to arrive at approximate uniformity. In some parts of the world, for example, it is the custom to apply a sliding scale of fines, adding a dollar (or whatever the currency may be) for each mile above the legal limit.

Such a system might or might not be satisfactory here, subject to magisterial variation in exceptional circumstances either way, but at least it would give people a feeling that there was equality of punishment. Certainly from the wide disparities currently noticed here and on the Mainland it would seem that some form of guidance without dictation for the magistrates from superior authority is desirable, if not essential.

When Psychiatry Backfires

PSYCHIATRY, still a comparative newcomer among the older sciences, has no doubt its place among those who would study human kind. It has been productive of some good and it has given promise of more. That is not to say, however, that everything a psychiatrist enunciates becomes a scientific fact. Far from it. There is some evidence that sheer, arrant nonsense is sometimes spoken in the name of psychiatry by those whom it would seem have fallen prey to the irregularities of the mind they have been affecting to treat. The infection may take strange forms, but abnormality is its first symptom.

Whether from a visitor briefly in the sound-padded studios of the BBC or from an armchair of pensioned ease, when bald attacks are made on the living faith of hundreds of millions of free peoples from the dawn of the Christian era, the wonder is not that one person or two should have gone off the deep end but that they are taken seriously in their own dilemma. The Christian ideal has survived far more weighted attacks than these small, lost voices crying in a wilderness of their own contrivance.

It is another matter, and one which the world of science may have to regard seriously, what is to be done with the number of practitioners whom psychiatry itself has taken for a ride. Perhaps there should be tests for those choosing to enter the profession to make sure that they themselves are of strong mind and not likely to be affected by the continued recital of the behavior patterns of abnormal patients who come to their office couches. Rest homes for tired psychiatrists might be in order. Certainly they stand in need of something, even if it is only cheering up.

Interpreting the News

West Displays Weakness

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

STUDENTS of Red Chinese tactics have quickly classified Peiping's offer to permit visits by relatives of the imprisoned American fliers as merely another effort to demonstrate in Asia the impotence of the United States and the West.

Some United Nations delegates professed to see a possibility that, after demonstrating to relatives how well the prisoners were treated, the Reds would release the men.

What that price might be, no one knew.

The principal UN reaction seemed to be that China was taking advantage of an original error, made when the United States first asked UN intervention despite the knowledge that the organization had nothing with which to trade.

The official Washington reaction, that relatives should not be encouraged to accept the Red invitation because the United States was in no position to protect them on such a trip, likewise was scouted by students of Red propaganda tactics. The Reds, they pointed out, would make a great play on their "humanitarian" attitude, and would take great pains to protect the visitors, if any.

No Americans have been granted passports for travel to Red China since 1949.

European Communist regimes have, in several cases, made much of appeals from relatives when releasing Westerners held in Russia and the satellites. In most instances, however, the basic reason has been a barter deal of some sort.

It has also demonstrated, by forcing the West to seek a cease-fire in the Formosa area, that the West has no intention of trying to reinstall a Free Chinese government on the mainland in any forseeable time, and that therefore there is de facto recognition of two Chinas.

In both cases the West is taking it on the chin politically, and that's all there is to it.

Odd Thoughts

By FRANK KELLEY

THERE'S probably nothing more heartening than a continued kindly interest on the part of old pals in what one is endeavoring to write entertainingly concerning a subject such as Vancuover Island, adjacent isles and tide-troubled waterways. One such a pal is Pat McGregor, who evidently considers (and he is right) his offerings on books pertinent to pilotage and courses, as well as charts of the British Columbia coast, have considerable value in maintaining reader interest in the 70-odd-year story about Ripple Rock and its position in Seymour Narrows.

That is why, anyway, he gave me, with best holiday wishes, a Canadian hydrographic chart of Discovery Passage with a large inset of Seymour Narrows and approaches. The survey was made in 1944 and it was a nice though on Pat's part, the gift being very much appreciated and one which I shall cherish even if I live long enough to see the chart that will be necessary to mariners after the federal government spends several millions of dollars in dissipating the yardage of Ripple Rock over the bottom of the passage.

Another long-time pal who is apparently satisfied that I am still very much interested in shipping and all men who do business in Pacific Coast waters is Eric Marshall—a belief in which I must say is justified as I receive copies of The Marine Digest and the weekly compendium of Pacific Coast shipping, Pacific Shipper, in addition to the weekly Bulletin published at Bonn by the press and information office of the German Federal Government, as well as another highly interesting publication from Britain, Coming Events, published by the British Travel and Holidays Association.

It is nice to know, too, a man who is good by nature as well as by name. Of such is Jim Goodman, a modest chap who does not publicize his wealth of good fellowship for humans generally, even when admitting a weakness for a be-kind-to-animals-and-birds bent in active practice as well as thought. That is why or how, when the oil from a tanker was spilled in the vicinity of Oak Bay and coated the water thereabouts, Mr. and Mrs. Goodman, with son Paul, lost no time in hurrying to the scene when the predicament of numerous wildfowl was in the news a few months since.

The little party was not set on putting the birds out of their misery with rifle ball and shogtun pellet, the desire being to retrieve if possible any that a heavy coating of oil might prevent flying and render not too difficult to capture; with a detergent application they hoped to cleanse the feathers of any caught, restore them to normalcy, when they were to be returned to their natural element.

After some careful manoeuvring, the Goodmans managed to get four little lethargic-appearing birds of the duck breed into a box provided in anticipation of some such success. The oil proved too much for one of them even though it was given immediate attention. By the time they arrived at my home, where I was to have a look, the other three were beginning to show an interest in living. My wife supplied an eye-dropper of brandy for each one.

To make a long story short, most of the oil was later removed from the birds' feathers and it looked as though the three would survive. One languished when about ready to be returned to salt water, where one of the two remaining took to the sea as if nothing had ever happened; while the other, appearing uncertain and droopy at first, soon got the feel of its web feet and swam away with its perky companion.

Reports from Ottawa

THE government's action to end the tax dispute with Quebec is a remarkably simple tactical move which bears the clear imprint of Prime Minister St. Laurent's political genius.

The PM was motivated by two major considerations. He wanted to stop the double taxation of personal incomes in Quebec, and he wanted to preserve the existing tax rental agreements between Ottawa and the other nine provinces.

Premier Duplessis had demanded that his Quebec tax be made fully deductable from the federal income tax. St. Laurent has now given a final veto to this demand, but as an alternative he has stated that he will ask Parliament to authorize a 10 per cent reduction in federal income taxes for people who live in provinces which levy provincial income taxes.

Significantly, the PM's proposal isn't an offer conditional upon acceptance by Duplessis. It is a flat statement of what the federal government will do—and by inference, of all the federal government will do—to break the long deadlock with Quebec. The 10 per cent concession will be made as the federal government's contribution towards the equation of taxation between Quebec and the other provinces, regardless of Duplessis' reaction to it.

* * *

The federal move means that so far as Ottawa is concerned, any continuing and residual differential between the total income tax which people in Quebec pay and what those in other provinces pay will be the responsibility of the Quebec government.

If Duplessis does nothing to match Ottawa's move, there will be such a difference. The Quebec law now requires about 300,000 Quebec residents to pay a provincial tax amounting to some 15 per cent of their federal tax. Under a 1946 agreement, Ottawa allows a federal tax credit of 5 per cent to those who pay provincial income taxes.

Under the St. Laurent plan this credit will be increased to 10 per cent, and will be extended to all federal taxpayers in Quebec—not just those who pay the provincial tax.

Consequently the 300,000 will still be paying about 5 per cent more tax than other Canadians unless the Quebec government reduces its tax from 15 to 10 per cent of the federal tax. Such action would result in lower revenues from the provincial tax. The only way the Duplessis government could recoup the loss would be by broadening its tax base. It could reduce its tax exemptions so the tax would apply to all the 750,000 Quebec residents who pay federal income tax, and not just the top 300,000.

* * *

Since there's no question of the federal government collecting the provincial tax and remitting it to Quebec, a 150 per cent increase in the number of provincial income taxpayers would sharply increase Quebec's tax collection costs without a commensurate increase in revenues. Individual tax liabilities become progressively smaller in the lower income brackets.

But an even more important consideration for the Duplessis government may be the political risk in taxing the "little man" out of the 10 per cent federal tax cut which St. Laurent has unexpectedly promised him.

Thus the PM has gone half way towards ending double taxation in Quebec, has made a strong bid for the good will and votes of all Quebeckers who pay federal income tax, and has offered the same deal to all other provincial premiers without expecting that any will accept it.

Duplessis may still take action to wipe out the rest of the double tax burden, but so far as St. Laurent is concerned the game is over.

Woman of the Year

(From The Ottawa Journal)

WE stretch back into 1954 for a moment to announce our woman of the year—Princess Wapiti.

We select her because she kept her head while all the other princesses were losing theirs and moaning for Hollywood contracts. Miss Evelyn Eagle Speaker, a pretty Alberta girl, was named Princess Wapiti by a council of Indian bands when she was chosen Queen of the Calgary Stampede. She had her moments of glory riding in the Stampede Parade and welcoming distinguished guests. But, we think, any princess could do that.

Princess Wapiti is our princess because she worked for her room and board while attending business school—she was a princess only during the vacation—and graduated with honors. She completed the year with a general average of 90 per cent and won medals for typing proficiency and one of the highest marks ever given by the school for shorthand.

Now she is employed by a Calgary business firm and proves every day that beauty and brains and Indian dignity have restored the sheen to the title she was given.

Under the Dome

By RAY BAINES
Colonist Legislative Reporter

NOBODY likes to pay taxes but everyone pays them. Broadly speaking we pay taxes on the basis of the wealth we have or have not. The ability-to-pay principle in a general way is accepted at all three levels of government.

If you get a large income your federal income tax is high. If you buy the quantity and quality of goods in proportion to that income your provincial sales tax payments are high. If you own plenty of expensive property your municipal real property tax is high.

But whether you are wealthy or poor you pay something to all three levels of government, or, for our purposes here, it might be better to say all three governments collect something from you.

As far as the fellow at the bottom is concerned, disputes over distribution of taxes mean little. As someone said, he is not concerned so much over who owns the dog as how deep the bite is.

But the disputes go on. And they can be immensely complicated. That's why provincial governments go to Ottawa to seek changes in their tax rental agreements and municipalities come to Victoria asking for increased provincial grants.

* * *

Disputes are complicated because they usually resolve themselves into contests over responsibility. What is a purely local responsibility?—a provincial responsibility?—or a federal one. Should a property owner in Penticton with no children share in the cost of educating the five children of a fellow who rents a house in Victoria? Is it the responsibility of a farmer living on a gravel road in Smithers to help pay for a super-highway out of Vancouver? Should a worker in Prince George help pay the cost of looking after a down-and-outer in Vancouver whom he will never see? It could go on. There are a million other examples.

Gradually principles change and with them areas of taxation change. It is generally accepted, for example, that education is everybody's business—so everyone pays. So is social welfare. And in British Columbia [illegible] hospital care is paid for by [illegible]one for those of their numbers [illegible] will need it.

[illegible]he shift of the cost of anything from municipal to provincial level merely has the effect of spreading the load over more backs. But it does not shed it.

* * *

Last week the Union of British Columbia Municipalities presented a brief to the provincial cabinet which contained examples of this. Generally they wanted the province to assume a greater share of the cost of something which has come to be accepted as largely a provincial responsibility.

There was the cost of social welfare. The province now pays municipalities 80 per cent of the cost of maintaining needy persons within their borders. The province also pays part of the salaries of municipally employed welfare workers. This means that people in a rich municipality with a small welfare case load help support needy persons in other municipalities with large case loads. They pay through provincial taxes what they escape in municipal taxes.

But the UBCM says if we are going that far—if we accept the principle—then we should go the rest of the way. That is, the province should also assume 80 per cent of the cost of social service administration.

It's the same with hospital care, they say. At one time hospitals were largely the responsibility of the municipalities in which they were located. They were supported by privately paid bills and sometimes philanthropy. Now the bills are paid by the provincial government, which collects the money from everyone who buys a taxable item anywhere in British Columbia.

* * *

But under the old system municipalities were required to pay 70 cents a day for every patient in one of their own hospitals. This was poured back into the hospitals in the form of improvements and expansion, purchase of equipment and grants.

They are still required to pay this 70 cents a day. And now they want it removed. We have accepted a new principle, they argue. Cost of hospital care is now shared by everyone in the province on what we might call an "ability-to-buy" basis. Therefore municipal taxpayers within any one municipality should not have to pay what they call a hidden form of double taxation.

"No longer can there be any justification whatsoever for the continuance of this unfair and inequitable impost against the owners of real property in this province," the UBCM says.

In other words, they are saying spread the burden over more backs if you accept the principle that hospital care, like education and welfare, is now everyone's business.

Bible Thought For Today

"Entreat me not to leave thee . . . for whither thou goest I will go, and where thou lodgest, I will lodge, thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."—Ruth 1:16.

This is one of the loveliest things ever spoken by a daughter-in-law to her mother-in-law. Ruth was a worthy ancestor of that towering figure, the Great Nazarene, so many centuries later.

Tourist Business Drops Off

British Columbia experienced a 1.9 per cent drop in its tourist business during 1954, slightly less than the national average decline of 2.2 per cent.

Year-end figures from the department of trade and industry show that 278,376 U.S. vehicles entered the province last year compared to 283,846 in 1953, a record year. Both totals were higher than the 262,550 in 1952.

Officials say that estimating 3.5 persons per car means that 1,000,000 persons came into the province last year not counting those who arrived by ship, plane, bus and train.

Uninviting summer weather is blamed by government officials for the decline.

HULL DAILY MAIL . . . "Another woman was brought in a meeting in a bath-chair. Mr. Woodhead prayed for her and instead of being wheeled home in a bath-chair, she wheeled the chair home herself."

NORTH DEVON HERALD . . . Reporting on Barnstaple Campaign—"Hall filled to utmost capacity. One of the successful cures was of a boy who was blind in his left eye. Another was the case of a young lady who suffered from Bright's disease. She was prayed for . . . and was healed."

FROM THE DANISH PRESS . . . "The English Evangelist has been received with great attention in Denmark . . . 600 people have been converted and many sick healed. Some had been sick for 23 years."

Cabinet Clears Decks

Coming Legislation Kept Under Wraps

The provincial cabinet has wound up its pre-sessional week without indicating any major surprise legislation for the legislative session opening Tuesday.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett has avoided any leaks of the government's intentions but he has indicated the new school formula will be the major session business.

He has stated definitely that there will be no tax increases but that this year's budget will not be lower than the record $210,000,000 budget brought down last year.

MILLIONS MORE

He has promised that the school formula will provide "several millions more" for hard-pressed municipalities in their effort to meet rising school costs. For this reason, he has said, no cut in the budget can be expected.

No amendments are expected for the government's Labor Relations Act which aroused the wrath of organized labor when it was passed last spring.

But there are reports the government will amend the Workmen's Compensation Act to extend coverage to thousands of B.C. fishermen. Labor Minister Lyle Wicks is said to have discussed such an amendment with the 9,000-member United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (AFL).

There will probably be some amendments to the Electric Power Act to expand the borrowing powers of the B.C. Power Commission in view of the huge hydro-electric developments planned for Vancouver Island and the Mainland in the next few years.

The legislature will deal with a private bill to amend Vancouver's charter. One proposed amendment would permit plebiscites on questions involving expenditure of money to be submitted only to property owners.

The legislature will be asked to deal with two important agreements already drawn up by the cabinet. The first is the controversial Kaiser dam agreement, which may be blocked by federal legislation, and the other is the purchase of the Lion's Gate Bridge.

Premier Aims At Timberman

Premier W. A. C. Bennett yesterday hit back at timber baron H. R. MacMillan who said Thursday high provincial taxes are killing the goose that lays the golden egg.

"MacMillan's business is a good business," the premier said. "If Mr. MacMillan calls it a goose then the goose is getting [illegible] Mr. MacMillan is expanding but I want to say the government is fair to industry and fair to capital."

Chairman of MacMillan & Bloedel, B.C.'s biggest forest industry, which has invested $70,000,000 in the province since 1944 and now plans another $30,000,000 expansion, Mr. MacMillan said that high taxes drained off company earnings and prevented new investment.

But he called B.C.'s forest management license policy "the most remunerative and far-sighted policy to sell timber and get a new crop yet devised in North America," and said the government was the real beneficiary of the system.

Premier Bennett said yesterday that total taxes the provincial government collects from the forest industry are less than 20 per cent of that which the federal government collects.

"Mr. MacMillan is wrong in saying that in securing a fair return to the people from their natural resources the government is unfair to industry," he said.

He added that at one time millions of dollars in natural resources were taken out of the Kootenays to build the city of Spokane and did not leave B.C. "one good school, one good hospital or one mile of good road" in return.

"Industry must pay its fair share," he said. "We want to see the people have good schools, good hospitals and good highways."

New Apartment For Hillside

A 10-suite 2½-story apartment will be built at 1125 Hillside at a cost of $50,000, architect E. Marjorie Hill announced yesterday.

The building is planned by Mrs. Mary Gray, 1201 Union Road.

Child's Stomach Full of Hardware

HAMILTON (CP) — During the last year, five-year-old Gay Cottingham of Hamilton has swallowed: three buttons, three dimes, three safety pins, one thimble and one bullet. The bullet was removed in an emergency operation the other day. Her distraught mother commented: "She'll swallow anything. I don't know what to do."

Codfish are said to be capable of spawning 3,500,000 eggs at one time.

Directors Handed King-Size Bouquet

BY VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Bouncy Doris Day handed a king-size bouquet to the men behind the cameras this week, saying, "Directors are the most important persons in any movie.

"Love stories, westerns and whodunits are basically the same," she added, "only the director makes them different and interesting. And he often makes a bad story into a really good picture.

Doris chattered happily during lunch at the MGM commissary where she's making her first picture away from her home lot—Warner Brothers. The blonde songbird admitted she was frightened at first about making a picture at another studio.

The shapely musical star says directors owe a debt of gratitude to Italian movies which billed directors over stars. Roberto Rossellini and Vittorio de Sica became internationally famous, causing American audiences to pay attention to Hollywood directors.

"Realism helped, too," she said. "Nowadays the public sees names like John Ford, George Stevens, Joe Pasternak, Michael Curtiz and they know they can expect to see a good picture—no matter who the stars are.

"Directors have gotten away from pictures loaded with pretty people. After all, how many of your friends look like Robert Taylor?"

Doris said as far as she's concerned King Vidor is among the greatest. He's currently working with her in "Love Me Or Leave Me," the life story of songstress Ruth Etting.

"Mr. Vidor is wonderfully patient—and that's the most important thing with actresses. The minute a director loses his patience, he loses the scene.

Sidney Platoon Slated

The Canadian Scottish Regiment plans to organize a mortar platoon at Sidney, Officer Commanding Jack Fawcett announced last night.

A company of the 156 Heavy Anti-Aircraft Regiment was formerly at Sidney, but has now been transferred to the strength of the 5th West Coast Harbor Defense Battery which operates from Bay Street Armory.

A recruiting meeting will be held at the Patricia Bay Airport armory next Wednesday at 8 p.m. Wanted are men for the militia battalion and boys aged 14 to 17 as cadets.

Establishment of the mortar platoon will be two officers and 43 other ranks, including four sergeants and five corporals.

Sgt. James Elliott and Sgt. Robert Harris have been posted to the new platoon.

TRAINING NIGHTS

Training nights will be Tuesday of each week at the Patricia Bay Airport armory where mortar platoon and basic training will be carried out. It is proposed later to hold battalion training at Bay Street Armory on Thursday nights.

Col. Fawcett said the Canadian Scottish also plans to support Sidney athletic activities.

He said it is planned to continue to maintain the same happy relations with the North Saanich and Sidney Community Association as the artillery company has done in the past and that army sports facilities will still be available.

Chief instructor of the new Sidney platoon will be WO 2 Frank Hopwood from Support Company in Victoria, an experienced mortarman who saw action with the British Army in North Africa.

Constable George Kent, RCMP, of Sidney, who was with the mortar platoon of the Canadian Scottish as a sergeant during the Second World War, is assisting in recruiting the new platoon.

Tax-Hater Leads French Revolution

PARIS (UP)—Pierre Poujade cheats on his taxes and it has made him a national hero.

The law says the handsome, 34-year-old Poujade should be in the Bastille. Instead he heads a movement of 800,000 Frenchmen and has traveled 45,000 miles in the past year teaching his case of Poujade—don't pay.

Poujade will carry his revolution to the capital Monday when he addresses five mass meetings in Paris expected to draw crowds of between 300,000 and 500,000.

That is something like 50 times the number of collectors in all France so it is understandable if the finance ministry looks the other way.

Cheating on taxes is, of course, nothing new in France. Artifices to that end are something of a national pastime. But never before had a Frenchman taken such a direct course as Poujade.

It started in his home town of Saint-Cere in southern France where Poujade ran a small stationery store to support his wife, three sons and daughter. He played on the football team, organized festivals and might have been a happy man except for one thing: Taxes.

"Mon Dieu!" he would complain to his wife. "This cannot go on."

Then, on a July day in 1953, he got word tax collectors were coming again to check his books. Poujade summoned his friends and soon the entire village had massed around his shop. They refused to let the collectors get near the store.

The movement snowballed. Tax men in small towns throughout the department found themselves accosted by surly mobs. Sometimes they were roughed up but generally they were allowed to leave unharmed but empty-handed.

Singer Meets Top Physicist

NEW YORK (UP) — Eartha Kitt, sultry singer of popular ballads, said yesterday Dr. Albert Einstein told her he didn't believe in reincarnation.

"He thinks reincarnation is just a silly superstition," she said.

Miss Kitt spent an hour talking with the famed physicist at his Princeton, N.J., home last Sunday. "It was one of the most important moments of my life," she said.

The unlikely meeting between a singer of such songs as "Santa Baby" and the world's foremost scientist came about after several weeks of correspondence.

"I didn't mean for people to know about it," Miss Kitt wailed when a United Press reporter telephoned her today. "I don't want Professor Einstein to think I did it for publicity."

SPORTS REVUE

By Jimmy Cannon

NEW YORK (NANA)—On most matters I'll give a little. It is possible that there may be a more beautiful name than Maggie but I haven't heard it. You can rile me up by telling me that Jack Dempsey would knock out Joe Louis, but we don't have to go to court about it. Personally, I prefer pineapple pie with mouse-trap cheese as a dessert on the end of any meal but I wouldn't make a federal case if you don't join me.

Don't gate me on this one though. I believe Joe DiMaggio belongs in baseball's Hall of Fame and I'd like to vote for him twice although I can only go to the post office once on the ballot they sent me.

* * *

On a soft winter day, Palm Springs in California is a beautiful place to be at sunset but I'll allow you to state your case if you like Miami. I'd rather watch Bob Cousy than any other basketball player but I'm not going to bolt if you challenge me. I can even understand why people drink mash whisky. Chances are I'll steam if you tell me there's a girl in the theatre with Carol Haney's silly loveliness but I'm not going to stop talking to you if you come up with a contender.

But I'm positive Joe DiMaggio belongs in the Hall of Fame.

* * *

I'll go with Eddie Arcaro as the greatest of all jockeys in the ages of racing but I'll respect your opinion if you pick Earl Sande. If you tell me there's a better breakfast than scrambled eggs, green peppers and fried potatoes, I'll be kind to you in your ignorance. I'll tolerate you if you don't put in with me when I say Fred Allen is the standout theatrical humorist of our time. I'll even let you get away with holding out for a handsomer street than Fifth Avenue.

But I'm sure Joe DiMaggio should be in the Hall of Fame right now.

* * *

Some think Dizzy Dean was a finer pitcher than Carl Hubbell but I don't raise my voice. If there must be ballroom dancers, Tony and Sally De Marco are my act but I'll allow you to protest. I suggest that John Ford's "Lost Patrol" was the most thrilling movie I've ever seen but I can see your point if you make it "The Informer."

But you're dead wrong if you don't think Joe DiMaggio doesn't belong in the Hall of Fame.

* * *

If you're in love and it's late at night, it's my belief that Tommy Lyman will help your cause, although there are some who don't get it and I'm ready to debate them. The most powerful back I've ever seen on a football field was Bronko Nagurski but I'm not going to ask you to take off your coat if you pick on me.

But shut up and scram if you hesitate about Joe DiMaggio being in the Hall of Fame.

* * *

If you've ever been bored by Tony Canzoneri as a fighter, I'll resent it but it's not the end of a friendship. Could you give a reason why Lee Tracy isn't one of the greatest of modern actors. I'd listen but I wouldn't be impressed by your taste. Inform me you saw Tom Fool run and then try to sell me you weren't excited and I'll put you away as a guy who should be barred from a race track but I'll still say hello.

But make a crack that Joe DiMaggio doesn't belong in the Hall of Fame and I'll advise you to take your business around the corner.

* * *

Claim that Smith and Dale don't make you laugh and I'll pity you but I'll still be seen in public with you. Agitate for Liberace as a guy who entertains people and I'll be amused with you but I'll change the subject. Suppose you insist Joe McCarthy wasn't a great manager, I withdraw my respect but I won't ask you to step outside. If you put any American novelist in the same class with Ernest Hemingway, I'll probably be late for the next appointment but I'm not going to call a cop.

But if you don't think Joe DiMaggio belongs in the Hall of Fame, I hope I lose your telephone number.

* * *

If you attempt to praise violets over orchids, I'll pass but I'm not going to make a scene. Some people don't fall for Ella Fitzgerald's singing and I wish they wouldn't bring it up. Try to con me into rare steak and I'll back off but I'm not going to ask the joint to bar you.

But if you give me any guff about Joe DiMaggio not qualifying for the Hall of Fame, grab your hat, I like solitude better.

* * *

I'll let you get away with it if you consider hockey a sport, but it won't provoke my admiration. Demean Lou Little as a football coach and I know you and I are setting up a debate but I don't think your driver's license should be revoked. I won't congratulate you if you aren't gladdened by Claude Monet's paintings but I won't sue you. I won't call an alienist if you favor wrestling but I won't ask you for any advice either.

But if you don't think Joe DiMaggio is ready for Cooperstown, you belong in another country.

Hard-Hitting Basilio Decisions Mueller

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UP)—Top welterweight contender Carmen Basilio spotted Peter Mueller of Germany five pounds last night and virtually shattered the "Cologne Clown's" dreams of ultimately winning the world middleweight title with smashing left hooks that registered one knockdown and had him bloody and reeling at times, before winning a unanimous 10-round decision.

Mueller, was was already receiving consideration as middleweight title contender because of three straight American victories weighed 157 pounds to Basilio's 152, for their nationally televised and broadcast brawl before a turn-away crowd of 8,800.

They fought so savagely that in the seventh round Basilio hit referee Harry Kessler on the chin with a left hook by mistake. The punch left a smear of Mueller's blood on Kessler's chin. Basilio's belt to the referee's jaw was a definite switch, for the German madcap had once knocked out an annoying referee at Cologne.

Basilio's victory over the rugged German doubtless clinched for him the tentatively scheduled shot at Johnny Saxton's welterweight crown in Syracuse April 1.

Carmen fought like a champion against a very unorthodox opponent, who knocked him back on his heels several times with hard inside uppercuts to the chin.

Ace Cagers Drub Eagles

Ace Plumbers stretched their lead in the Victoria and District Basketball League's junior boys circuit last night by drubbing Eagles, 41-16, at the S. J. Willis gym.

Chronic Concussion To Replace 'Punchy'

LONDON (CP)—From now on "punch drunk" fighters in Britain are to be known as boxers with "chronic concussion."

J. W. Graham, administrative steward of the British Boxing Board of Control, made the announcement Friday in the British Medical Journal in an article on boxing.

He said the decision to substitute "chronic concussion" was taken because of the stigma attached to the "punch drunk" phrase.

Graham reported that all licensed referees have been notified they must not allow a boxer to take unnecessary punishment and, under no circumstances, allow a defenseless boxer to be struck.

Reporting that since the Second World War there have been five fatalities in the professional ring in Britain, he said most were caused not by blows but by the boxer striking the back of his head on the ring floor.

Totems Down Cadets, 55-41, Meet Normal School Tonight

Victoria High Totems set the stage last night for what could be their toughest test of the season when they trimmed Royal Roads, 55-41, to gain the final of the third annual interscholastic basketball tournament at the Fernwood gym.

Powerful Normal School, which holds a victory over the Totems, will provide the opposition for the defending champions. The teachers, who won the tourney two years ago, had little trouble in brushing past Victoria Vikings, 66-33, and will meet Victoria High for the championship and the Times Trophy tonight at 8.30.

Royal Roads and Vikings will meet tonight to decide third and fourth places in the two-day tourney with the Hi-Y Trophy going to the club finishing in third place. Opening game gets under way at 7.30.

Normal School piled up a 14-4 lead in the first quarter and took full advantage of a sharp passing attack to extend the margin to 32-14 at half-time. Outclassing their opponents from start to finish, the winners drove on to a 51-23 edge in the third quarter and out-scored the Vikings 15-10 in the final quarter.

Al Snowsell and Dave Worthy paced the winners with 12 and 11 points while Gary Corbett hooped 10 points in a losing cause.

Totems had their hands full with a scrappy Royal Roads squad. Leading 31-19 at half-time, the defending champions saw the cadets whittle the lead to five points in the first six minutes of the third quarter, but the losers lacked the power to continue the drive in the final session.

Totem guard Tom English was top scorer in the two games with 14 points while Ron Binnie and Tim Ryley each had 10 points for the cadets.

A panel of judges will select an all-star team and pick a most valuable player following tonight's championship game.

Lineups:

Normal School—Don Hill 6, Pete Bulatovicich 7, Dave Williamson 10, Al Snowsell 12, Dave Worthy 11, Len Anderson 8, Barry Jackson 4, Pete Winter 8. Total—66.

Victoria College—Dave Price 2, Bill Harris 2, Hill Oldham 8, Mike Partridge 8, Gary Corbett 10, Glen Stewart 2, Noel Boston 2. Total—33.

Victoria High—Bob Tomlinson 6, Ken McCullough 2, Tom English 14, Wally Skillings 11, Don Perry 3, Ed Kowalyk 5, Bud Rutherford 2, Doug Jones 10. Total—53.

Royal Roads—Ron Binnie 10, Jim Devaney 7, Pat Crofton 4, Tim Ryley 10, Donald Brown 7, Wheatly 1, Belar 2. Total—41.

Umpire Retires After Rhubarb

(From UP and AP Reports)

BOSTON—Tough little Bill Stewart wound up his colorful 22-year career as a National League umpire in a typical rhubarb yesterday, retiring in protest because he had not been promoted to supervisor of umpires.

While league president Warren Giles in Cincinnati praised Stewart "as a credit to the umpiring profession and a man whose integrity and loyalty have contributed in a large measure to the game to which he gave so much," Stewart had no such gentle remarks.

"My retirement was promoted by my failure to be appointed umpire supervisor," he said. "I had my heart set on it. I was appointed verbally once when Ford Frick was president of the league and I figured I had the experience."

Stewart, the senior umpire in the league, said his future plans "still are a little indefinite—it is just a question until I weigh things over a little." He said he had a "definite business opportunity" and that he might take a position in some other baseball capacity. Stewart will receive a pension from the league.

MANY SPORTS

Baseball was always his major sport, as a pitcher, outfielder, manager, and later umpire, but he had his turn as a track man, wrestler, football player, hockey team manager and hockey referee, and a scout. He also refereed boxing matches.

He was even on the coaching staffs of Boston University, Harvard and Dartmouth.

Stewart never lost that kid dream of his of being a great pitcher.

"I could slay 'em in this league," he used to say with a grin.

His chance for a major league berth came with Chicago White Sox of the American League in 1919, but he fell during the winter and hurt his pitching arm.

LONG RECORD

He joined the National League in August, 1933, and has a record of having worked 715 consecutive games before being sent to hospital with appendicitis a few years ago.

Meanwhile he had won a reputation as a fine hockey referee, working the job for nine years in the NHL. He was a hero for a few months in 1938 when he managed Chicago Black Hawks to the Stanley Cup.

Speaking Briefly

The $15,000 B.C. Open golf championship will be played at Shaughnessy Golf Course in Vancouver, June 29 to July 2, officials said yesterday. Many leading U.S. pros are expected to enter, under sanction of the PGA.

* * *

Guard Bob Levenhagen has been signed by B.C. Lions for another year.

* * *

Canadian swimming and diving championships will be held at McGill University, August 18-20. Vancouver was host last year.

* * *

Right-hander Robin Roberts, a 20-game winner for five seasons, has signed again with Philadelphia Phillies of the National League.

West Coast Major League Possible DiMaggio Berth

LOS ANGELES (AP)—He's 40 now and has been away from the baseball wars four years, but Joe DiMaggio would be interested in getting back in some capacity, if and when the major leagues come to the west coast.

The Yankee Clipper, a bit thinner than his 187-pound playing weight and his hair flecked with grey, was in a reflective mood when a reporter found him loonging in a Hollywood hotel lobby Thursday.

"I'm glad I played ball when I did," he said. "In my era we had great rookies coming up in handfuls every spring. Now, if there's a Willie Mays once in two years, baseball people consider themselves lucky. I think there are too many buildings and not enough vacant lots. Maybe the little leagues will fill the gap, eventually."

STILL THINKING

Joe said he's still mulling over what he'll do for the rest of his life. He said he had rejected many business offers. Financially, he's fairly secure.

"If I had a chance to catch on in the majors in an executive capacity after the majors come here, I'd like that," he said. "But I don't want to leave California. I'm happy here. I divide my time between Los Angeles and San Francisco."

Right now, Joe is lining up a television show and is flying back to New York next week to discuss it. He says he may take a group of major leaguers of Italian descent to Italy next October.

Last night's scores: VICTORIA 5 at Vancouver 2.

Next games tonight: Vancouver at New Westminster, VICTORIA at Edmonton; Calgary at Saskatoon.

Victoria Cougars snapped a five-game winless streak and held their eight-point edge over Vancouver Canucks at Calgary last night by blasting the Stampeders, 6-2, in a fast-moving Western Hockey League game before 4,709 spectators.

Breaking loose for four goals in a wide-open second period, the Cougars showed a complete reversal of form in their 5-0 blanking at the hands of Saskatoon Wednesday night and dominated play in all departments.

The Canucks continued their late-season bid for a playoff berth by trimming New Westminster, 5-2, at Vancouver for their fourth straight victory over the second-place Royals, who missed a chance to whittle Edmonton's five-point lead.

Victoria came up with a brilliant checking display, giving goalie Marcel Pelletier sound protection in the first two periods, and flashed a potent passing attack in the second period. A Calgary letdown enabled the winners to rap in three goals in just over three minutes, taking a 4-0 bulge.

It was Victoria's second victory in four starts at Calgary this season and gave the Island club three points of a possible six in its current Prairie trip, which winds up at Edmonton tonight.

Scoring was well divided with Mark Marquess, Alex Kuzma, Doug Macaulay, Andy Hebenton, Doug Anderson and Colin Kilburn getting the goals. Gene Achtymichuk, Billy Reay and Ed Dorohoy each had two assists.

Pelletier had his shutout going until 1.52 of the third period, when Gerry Couture's low shot found the open corner. Fred Hucul got credit for the final goal, Pelletier pulling the puck into the net while attempting to clear.

Kilburn scored the only goal of the first period and Anderson, Hebenton and Kuzma all scored on close-in plays beween 8.30 and 11.55 of the second frame to give the winners a comanding lead.

BIG SECOND

At Vancouver, more than 5,000 fans watched the Canucks bang in three goals in the second period to carry a 4-2 lead into the final session.

Fred Brown sparked the winners with two goals and Hugh Barlow, Mid Houghton and John Reeve added singletons. Phil Maloney added three assists and Reeve two as the newcomers continued to spark the late-season drive.

Valorie Fonteyne, up from Kelowna Packers of the Okanagan League on a three-game trial, and Doug Adam were the New Westminster marksmen.

Globetrotters Beat Alberni

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — The Harlem Globetrotters invaded this basketball-conscious town Friday night and clowned their way to a 55-49 win over the professional Boston Whirlwinds.

More than 1,000 fans turned out to watch the Trotters display their collection of hoop lore. Bob Hall dumped in 24 points for the Harlem dandies.

The Alberni Athletics were beaten 38-32 by the Whirlwinds and 40-14 by the Globetrotters in short preliminary matches.

WIFU To Discuss Splitting of Gates

CALGARY (CP)—Delegates to the annual Western Interprovincial Football Union meeting here today are reported ready to consider splitting gate receipts to help restore financial balance over the five-team league—an arrangement strongly opposed by B.C. Lions.

Vic Obeck of Montreal and Jim McCaffery of Ottawa, executives of the eastern Big Four which last week voted 3-1 in favor of gate-splitting, arrived in Calgary Friday and were expected to review the eastern plan with WIFU delegates during the week end.

Any WIFU consideration of sharing ticket profits would be the league's first. Except in exhibition games, when the visiting team receives a percentage of the gate, WIFU teams now reap full benefit from home-game receipts.

Any change would probably be prompted by the extra expenses incurred last season by Prairie clubs in traveling to and from Vancouver.

Lions president Don Mackenzie said recently the Lions executive has never seriously considered the matter.

In Philadelphia, officials of the National Football League and the Big Four are going to sit down around a table today and try once again to work out a no-raiding agreement on player contracts.

"It's a step in the right direction but there are many obstacles to overcome," NFL commissioner Bert Bell said Friday.

Australians Out for 185

ADELAIDE, Australia (Reuters) — The English touring cricket team bowled out South Australia for 185 on the first day of a match here Friday but forfeited some of its advantage in losing both openers, Edrich and Graveney, for 52 by the close.

Chief obstructor to the English bowlers was the Australian Test reject, Gil Langley, who pleased his local crowd by stopping a complete collapse after five wickets had fallen for 80 runs.

Langley, displaced by Len Maddocks as wicketkeeper in the Test team because of supposedly inferior batting, stayed just over two hours and was last out for 53.

Pickup Wins High School Cross-Country

Jim Pickup of House III captured the annual Victoria High School inter-house cross-country race yesterday but he couldn't prevent House II from sweeping team honors in the 4.2-mile event.

Runners from House II filled three of the top five positions with Ian Fraser and John Gilliland, both of the winning team, finishing second and third. Fraser, a promising runner with still two years to go at the city institution, held the lead for the first half of the race before Pickup surged in front and won in the time of 22 minutes and 17 seconds.

House II finished with 10 points, followed by House III with 15, House I with 25 and House IV with 30. A total of 12 runners from the four houses took part.

Standings: 1, Macfadyen (III); 2, W. Jay (II); 6, B. Hogue (II); 7, G. Cowley (I); 8, Watkins (IV); 9, Atkinson (I); 10, Mar (III); 11, Hamilton (II); 12, Gough (II).

Sports Parade

BY OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK (UP) — The fight mob is branded as a set insensitive to suffering, but almost to a man they were hoping yesterday that Sugar Ray Robinson would "hang 'em up before he gets busted up."

On the whole they are men calloused to cruelty. Yet they have an almost reverential feeling for the few truly great fighters who come along occasionally and raise boxing from the shoddy to something approaching the sublime.

Sugar Ray is one of those idols and they regard as a personal affront his grim defiance of the oft-proved dictum that "they never come back."

A scattered few held to the illusion that so great were the fistic skills of the dancing dynamiter that he might be the exception. Until, that is, he ran into a tattered "Tiger" named Ralph Jones at Chicago Wednesday night.

If you saw the fight you might have gotten the impression that "Tiger" Jones was a young man with a bright future. Yet, despite his comparatively youthful 24 years, the "Tiger" long ago was labeled strictly a trial horse.

* * *

Robinson doesn't want to believe that he has rusted so completely. Which is why, after losing a unanimous 10-round decision, he announced that he would stick to his comeback.

Even though, according to the vote of the three officials, he won only one round.

It is easy to sum up the critical observations of the fight mob:

"His reflexes were gone, his punch wasn't sharp, he was easy to hit and he ran out of gas."

That is the epitaph of every champion who ever tried a comeback after a long layoff.

Go all the way back to the days when they first started putting gloves on the bare-knuckle brawlers and it is the same. There were a lot of great ones who laid off and then attempted unsuccessfully to regain the glory which was gone — Gentleman Jim Corbett, Jim Jeffries and on down through such of the immortals as Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis, Henry Armstrong, Benny Leonard and Barney Ross.

* * *

They all had to learn the hard way the truth of the adage "they never come back." Sugar Ray apparently will, too, as he still dreams of crawling through the ropes against Carl (Bobo) Olson for a shot at the middleweight crown he once held.

Robinson remembers how he flattened Olson in 1950 and beat him again by decision in 1952. He ignores the memory of how tough that second fight was — and the fact that Bobo has come a long, long way in the busy months between while Sugar Ray was gathering fistic dust as a tap dancer.

But the boxing jury has convicted him.

"If he had been in there with a real puncher, instead of that so-called Tiger," one of them said, "he'd have been knocked colder than a landlady's heart. And every one will be that much harder now."

So they hope he hangs 'em up. They'll never forget the Sugar Ray Robinson of old, and they hate to see that memory robbed of its lustre.

Mrs. Humber Wins

Leonard Sets Record To Tie Second Place

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UP) — Tommy Bolt, the Texan with the near-perfect golf swing, took a four-stroke lead over the field at the end of the second round in the $15,000 San Diego open yesterday as 40 professionals cracked par on the Mission Valley Country Club course.

Bolt, displaying some of the greatest golf of his career, fired a five-under-par 67 yesterday to go with his brilliant opening round of 64 for a 131 total—13 strokes under par for 36 holes.

Closest to him came defending champion Gene Littler and veteran Stan Leonard of Vancouver, each with 135 after great 66s yesterday.

Seven strokes back of the leader there is a four-way tie for fourth place between Doug Ford, Bud Holscher, Paul McGuire and Jackie Burke, Jr., each with 138.

Bolt, playing a methodical game with no sign of the explosive temperament he has displayed on occasion, was out in 32 yesterday and back in a safe 35.

Leonard set a course record for the final nine holes. He was out in 36, but came back in 30. The old record for the back nine was 33.

[illegible] luck," he said. "I got that eagle on the 10th by blasting out of a bunker, 25 feet into the cup and on the 15th I got a birdie by sinking a putt that was all of 30 feet. The back nine was the best nine holes of golf I've ever had, although this is not the best round."

He had seven birds and an eagle on the great round, and was laying his irons up stiff to the pin.

Littler's round was 33-33. He had seven birdies and a single bogey. He had one 25-foot putt, but he too was lacing his irons straight to the pin.

Tall, Modest Michael Cowdrey Cricket's Graduate Boy Wonder

BY ARCH MacKENZIE

LONDON (CP) — Michael Colin Cowdrey, baby of England's cricket team and a key slugger, is a storybook character who may be able to improve his carefully nurtured talents with help from the supernatural.

Or possibly he simply knows a good tip when he sees one.

"Well played," said an anonymous telegram after the modest, six-foot cricketer had piled up his first century in an Australian match. "Read 1st book of Kings, chapter 18, verse 34."

Cowdrey, a religious young fellow among other things, looked up the pertinent verse, which said: "And he said 'do it the second time.' And they did it the second time. And he said 'do it the third time,' and they did it the third time."

The advice was followed to the letter as Cowdrey promptly added a second century, or 100 runs, in the same game. He scored his third in the match following, in which England took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five Test series.

Colin Cowdrey is one cricketer who has successfully survived the boy wonder stage, blossoming into hard-hitting maturity on the current Australian tour. He was just a twig of a lad when his father, a Bangalore tea planter who doted on cricket, started bending him toward fame.

At five, he was rarely without bat or ball, practicing on a pitch hacked from the Indian jungle. He had been named carefully so that his initials coincided with those of the Marylebone Cricket Club, the rules-making body better known as the MCC.

He was a bright, though plump, schoolboy star at 13 in batting and bowling. He played for Kent County at 17, and received his permanent team position there in 1951. He made the Oxford team his first year and was just 22 last Christmas Eve.

With Peter May of Surrey, another amateur several years older, Cowdrey dominates the younger generation and supports an England batting attack which is veteran-heavy. He hits hard and safely.

His modesty is a legend.

"I like to think of Cowdrey as the ideal product of the British public school idea; a hero to the young and a model to the others by his manners and his example," said one veteran sports reporter.

His trip to Australia was tinged with ironic tragedy. A few days before he landed to start the tour that his father had always dreamed of him making, he was informed that Cowdrey Sr. had died.

Market Ends Active Week With Flourish

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished the week with a flourishing rally.

Aircrafts were a strong feature of the vigorous recovery drive. They were joined by steels, oils, railroads, rubbers and a number of individual gainers. Volume was 2,690,000 shares.

Panhandle Oil was at the top of the most active list up ⅝ at 12 on 61,100 shares.

On the American exchange, Royalite Oil was up ¼.

Rousing Advance

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market closed a week of lower movements Friday with a rousing advance.

Prices gained from the opening and continued climbing through to the close. The base metal companies gained almost a point and the western oil index three-quarters of a point.

For the fifth straight session the volume kept above 7,000,000 shares. Final volume was 7,820,000 shares.

Edged Forward

MONTREAL (CP) — The stock market edged forward in active trading at the close.

Great Lakes was up a point and Donalda was 1¼ higher. Up ⅛ were Walker, Aluminum and International Nickel. Abitibi and BA Oil each improved ⅝ while General Dynamics was ⅛ better.

International Paper lost a point and McColl was off ⅝. Down ¼ were Algoma CIL and du Pont.

The industrial volume was 2,100 shares and mines 590,000.

Good Headway

LONDON (Reuters) — The London stock market continued to make good headway on renewed investment buying. Gilt-edged issues were again the exception, however, because of money rate uncertainties. Prices declined fractionally.

Amazing Amounts Raised by Funds

BY HARRY C. MEARNS AND COLIN P. RUTHERFORD
(A. E. AMES & CO.)

During the past six or seven months we have witnessed the formation of at least six new investment trusts in the United States, mainly of Canadian securities.

Mearns

The various funds have been incorporated in Canada and registered under the United States Investment Company Act of 1940.

Generally speaking these funds have been incorporated for the purpose of providing a means by which residents of the United States may invest in the securities of companies deriving their income from sources outside the United States, and particularly from Canada, on a basis which offers certain tax advantages over direct investment in such securities.

Rutherford

The investment policies are founded on the belief in the present soundness and long term growth prospects of Canadian industry and the development of the vast natural resources of Canada.

INCORPORATED

The following funds were incorporated in 1954: Scudder Fund of Canada Ltd., Canada General Fund 1954, Ltd., New York Capital Fund of Canada; United Funds of Canada Ltd., Templeton Growth Fund of Canada, Keystone Fund of Canada Ltd.

The latest figures available showing the amount of money raised by the funds in the U.S. add up to the amazing total of $142,750,000 and it is therefore not difficult to visualize the profound effect these operations have had on the Canadian market.

These funds will invest principally in such securities as are likely, in the judgment of the management, to give the best long-term investment performance.

In Canada we have many relatively small companies and the capitalizations are not large, therefore the shares purchased by the funds further reduces the floating supply. This condition has forced up the price of some issues very sharply and has reduced the yield in many cases to around 3 per cent or less.

WIDE LIST

The purchases completed include a wide list of Canadian stocks, some of which are as follows:

Ford Motor Co. of Canada, Asbestos Corp., Canadian Vickers Ltd., Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd., Gypsum Lime & Alabastine Canada Ltd., MacMillan & Bloedel Co., Canadian Industries Ltd., Dominion Tar & Chemical Co. Ltd., Canadian Industries (1954) Ltd., Industrial Acceptance Corp., Aluminum Ltd. Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co., B.C. Power Corp., International Nickel Co., Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting Co., Ltd., Steel of Canada, Noranda Mines Ltd., B.A. Oil Co., Imperial Oil Ltd., Abitibi Power & Paper Co., Powell River Co., Consolidated Paper Corp., Interprovincial Pipe Lines Ltd., Distillers Seagrams Ltd., Hiram Walker-Gooderham & Worts Ltd., bank stocks.

It is understood several other investment funds are being formed which could eventually run into many millions of dollars.

In recent weeks we have noticed the latest funds are investing in depressed or second-ary issues such as Home Oil Co. Ltd., Western Plywoods Co., B.C. Cassiar Asbestos Corp., B.C. Forest Products Ltd., Massey Harris Co. Ltd., General Steel Wares Ltd.

An example of the effect of the release of a favorable annual report is noticed during the past week in the market action of Cassiar Asbestos which rose from approximately 6½ to 8¼.

The funds intend to accumulate and reinvest all net income derived from dividends, interest or other sources. This in itself will provide a large constant flow of funds available for investment in our market.

Raging Storms Plague Tugs on Long Voyage

As shipshape as ever despite two bouts with hurricane-force winds and monster waves, the Victoria tugs Island Sovereign and Sudbury came home yesterday from Venezuela with three more tankers for their owner, Island Tug & Barge Co.

The spick-and-span tugs showed no signs of damage but it must have been a bad trip. Steve Michaud, 27-year-old able seaman of 1110 Borden Road, said, "Every man had his own thoughts during that last storm."

The seaman, one of the 15 crew members aboard the smaller Island Sovereign, was talking of a 36-hour ordeal January 17 and 18 off the Oregon coast, when winds were sometimes steady at [illegible] miles an hour and gusts at 100 miles an hour.

Skipper Roy Blake, 26, of 2622 Dalhousie, said weather was tough from south of San Francisco to Cape Flattery and added the Sovereign was have to or at [illegible] speed [illegible] northward [illegible] to the state of Washington.

MOUNTAINOUS SEAS

Worst of the storm was during the late afternoon of January 17 when the tug caught two 50-foot waves.

"We saw solid green coming right over her," the captain said. "But the towline to the Sudbury and tankers straightened her out every time."

However, both tugs' towlines were [illegible] and fattened be[illegible] company president said 2,000 feet of new line, two inches in diameter, has already been [illegible] as replacement at a cost of $[illegible].

PROUD OF TUG

Captain Blake, with Island Tug for 10 years and a master for three years, showed his pride in the Sovereign when he said, "We rode better than the Sudbury."

He and Capt. John McQuarrie of the Sudbury had told Mr. Michaud, 27, of 1110 Borden Road, said, "Every man had his own thoughts during that last storm."

After the Sovereign left Victoria December 11, "we ran into a storm at Cape Flattery," the skipper said. "It was just like working out into traffic from behind a parked car."

NO ONE HUNGRY

Cook Tom Kirby, 47, of 852 Canterbury said he was never seasick and all meals were cooked, but "on the way down I didn't have many customers."

Bosun Larry Cloutier, 45, of 3136 Quadra said only by the cook and the skipper were not seasick during the first storm.

"I thanked God when we got out of it," he said.

The Sovereign set a record for a B.C. tugboat by traveling 4,475 miles from San Pedro, California, to Guatemala and back in 26 days, six hours.

It was the longest non-stop voyage for a B.C. tug. Water was rationed to one wash per man per day, but there was plenty of food and fuel.

CHRISTMAS AGAIN

Although the Sovereign took [illegible] mail and presents to the sailors, [illegible] newmen, who left here December 4, and both ships' companies had Christmas dinners aboard, many Christmas presents were opened after the ships' tree here yesterday.

The three 3,150-ton tankers were purchased from Cregoe Petroleum Co. and brought from Lake Maracaibo, Venezuela.

They are larger than four similar tankers towed here by Island Tug & Barge. A seventh vessel, will be converted into self-dumping [illegible] and will carry 1,000 [illegible] feet of logs each [illegible] the B.C. coast.

Distance Means Little After Year at Wheel

BY BRUCE LOWTHER

A stocky, mild-mannered Victorian who says he was born to be a truck driver is getting loose about long-distance hauls after crossing the continent 18 times in the past year.

Aubrey Rocky Chant [illegible] a year during the afternoon and Leo Jandoc, left Victoria [illegible] ready to go again. He may work up to a freeloan [illegible] the road as much as 16 hours to begin his second year to 18 hours a day of long-distance trips [illegible].

A major hazard is the automobile driver, one of the Victoria truck driver, who shows less courtesy for the sprawling [illegible] for truck drivers A. Wed Van Lines [illegible] in Canada than in the United States.

Electrical Workers To Make Sparks Fly

A stormy meeting between electrical workers and their employers ended at Yarrows Ltd. and Victoria Machinery Depot is expected today to discuss state mediated contract negotiations.

Layoffs reported at Yarrows were being investigated last night and the reasons will be reported today by the union.

FIVE-CENT AWARD

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers [illegible] with a conciliation board [illegible] which recommended [illegible] other things a five-cent [illegible] over two years.

The union requested further negotiations.

The two companies accepted the conciliation award and at the same time notified the Labor Relations Board that they wished any strike vote to be government-supervised.

The board's award has been accepted by other unions concerned, the machinists and shipwrights in Victoria and the marine workers at Vancouver, where the award affected two companies.

NO GUESSES

Electrical workers in Victoria last night would not predict the possible outcome of this morning's meeting.

The spokesmen said no over tures had been made by the companies towards reopening negotiations.

The [illegible] meeting is faced with three courses: reiteration of the request for continued [illegible] acceptance of the board's recommendations or application for a strike vote.

Cannon Intrigues His Honor

Heartfelt Plea from Mother Launched Mill Bay Solarium

A pathetic appeal from an anxious mother on an island off the East coast of Vancouver Island led to the formation of a 25-year-old Vancouver Island institution which has helped more than 2,000 children during its history.

The Queen Alexandra Solarium 30 miles north of Victoria was opened March 1, 1927, two years after the mother cried for help.

Her 10-year-old daughter, suffering from tuberculosis of the spine, had to give up a Vancouver hospital bed to an even more acute case. The child was sent home in an ungainly cast. Her home was miles away from medical aid.

CAMPAIGN BEGUN

The child was readmitted to the Vancouver hospital and the Central Park Women's Institution in Vancouver, while helping to pay for her treatment, began a campaign which resulted in construction of the solarium.

The original small building has been much expanded since 1927 through construction of a new three-story building, nurses' homes, boiler house, playground, water system and other units.

Last year nearly 100 patients were treated at the sanatorium. The average stay of each patient was more than 90 days. In other words, most patients live in the sanatorium the year round. It is treated hospital, home, school and church.

The 1954 budget was $21,[illegible], of which $8,000 was contributed by local residents during the Shower of Dimes, which had $30,000 as its goal.

This year the goal for the 16th Shower of Dimes is again $30,000. The campaign will be promoted throughout the province during February.

In Victoria, Vancouver and other large centres, umbrellas will be placed in stores for donations. But people anywhere in B.C. can send contributions to Shower of Dimes, Box 177, Victoria.

The solarium Junior League, which is again conducting the campaign, has planned a big opening program in the Crystal Garden from 7 to 12 p.m. Tuesday, February 1.

The slogan is "Open Your Heart—Don't Break Theirs," and the hope is that donations will double those of 1954.

Burrard Inlet Spans In Engineers' Hands

BY RAY BAINES
Colonist Legislative Reporter

When Premier W. A. C. Bennett announced purchase by the B.C. government of the Lions Gate Bridge for $[illegible],000,000 yesterday, he also disclosed plans for an immediate survey for a second, and possibly a third, bridge or undersea tunnel across Burrard Inlet.

Tolls will not be increased either on the present bridge or the proposed second span, the premier said. They will be removed about 10 years after completion of the second bridge.

Had a new bridge not been necessary, tolls—25 cents for a car and driver and five cents for each passenger—could have been removed in about four and a half years.

GOES TO HOUSE

The legislature will be asked at this session to approve the purchase and give the government authority to proceed with a new bridge or tunnel as soon as engineers' recommendations are known.

The premier said the government in due course will place the bridge under the jurisdiction of the B.C. Toll Highways and Bridges Authority.

The government, he said, took over the bridge because it wanted to regain the rights given the company by a former government in what he considered a wide-open charter.

"We got all the rights back for the people that were given to the company by the old Liberal government," he said.

GUINNESS-OWNED

The Lions Gate Bridge was owned and operated by the First Narrows Bridge Co. Ltd., set up by the original investors, the Guinness interests of England, which own the British Pacific Properties on the North Shore.

The premier indicated that his government got a bargain on the span, after negotiating for some time. The Vancouver engineering firm of Swan, Brydges & Webster appraised the bridge at $[illegible] in November. The premier said the appraisal expressed [illegible] company owned at the site for a new bridge.

Completion of the sale was made last Thursday with P. D. Welsh, the bridge company manager.

ENGINEERING SURVEY

The premier said the question of additional bridges or a tunnel is now in the hands of engineers. Public works department engineers have been instructed to make surveys and then make recommendations to the toll authority as soon as possible.

"It could be one or two bridges or a tunnel at any point on the inlet," the premier said.

Cost of a second bridge like the Lions Gate has been estimated at $[illegible]. The premier said the bridge company asked for an increase in tolls in order to pay for a second bridge but the government refused.

Some observers have interpreted the premier's refusal as a squeeze play to force the bridge company to sell. But the premier said the government would not have broken the agreement which had been approved by the former government.

Ratepayers' Views on Schools Sought

Shift System, Makeshifts Coming in North Saanich

Ratepayers of School District No. 63 (North Saanich) will be asked to tell their trustees next month what to do about school construction, but whatever they decide won't save the schools from overcrowding this year.

"The schools of the district are all at saturation point," G. L. Chatterton, chairman of the school board by-law committee, said last night. "In September we'll be using the shift system, makeshifts and holes in the wall."

At a meeting at 8 p.m. February 14 in Mount Newton High School auditorium, the trustees will ask ratepayers what sort of a by-law should be prepared for presentation this year to relieve overcrowding.

"We will ask the people whether they want a one-year by-law or something that will solve the immediate problem," Mr. Chatterton said.

The problem, he said, was created by the defeat of the 1953 school by-law. The Saanich urban portion of the district voted 60 per cent in favor of school construction but the rest of the district voted 60 per cent against it.

The school system is short eight classrooms at present, and enrolment is expected to increase 10 per cent in September. Some school auditoriums have been divided to make two classrooms, rooms such as libraries are being used for instruction and temporary space has been hired in two halls near schools.

TV Talk

BY ROY PARRETT

One of the most popular daytime television shows in United States begins on KOMO-TV Monday.

It will be worth my while to get up early to see it though it starts at 8 a.m.

The show is called Today, and it stars Dave Garroway. It is different, to say the least. It presents the passing world as if through a window.

Television cameras are pointed out of the glass windows of a New York studio to pick up vignettes covering a wide range of human emotions.

The "actors" are passers-by from every walk of life, and from every age group.

You can expect anything to happen on Today—and it usually does. One day former President Truman strolled by catching the cameramen unprepared. Other important figures happed by from time to time.

The "man in the street" is pretty interesting too. One day a deaf mute visiting New York used sign language to tell his wife in St. Louis that he was all right.

Favorite pastime of the audiences watching from outside the studio is waiting for a glimpse of themselves on TV and photographing their image on the monitor screen.

One day the lovely [illegible] picked up a hair curlier [illegible] unheard. He quickly turned it over to reveal a large sign advertising a TV show built on a rival network!

Look for the new show on channel 4, Monday at 8 a.m.

Today's Highlights: Mole set adventures are in store for Disneyland followers on CBUT at 5:30, when Walt Disney presents the second part of "Disneyland Island."

Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey, Johnnie Ray and Patti Page are the entertainers on CBUT at 8. John Ireland is seen in Bach Whiskers on KVOS-TV at 9:30.

George Gobel entertains on [illegible] on KOMO-TV [illegible] Duke of West Point" at 11, while KING-TV offers a movie short, "Dead Men Walk" at 11:15.

". . . And this is the library."

Clams, Oysters Go Together

For a seafood dish that's really superb, combine those two delectable bivalves, clams and oysters. This creamy hearty soup might well be the focal point of a lunch or supper, followed merely by a salad and hot corn bread.

Melt 4 tablespoons of butter in a heavy pan. Add 1 to 1-2 tablespoons of minced celery and a tablespoon of minced onion, plus a minced clove of garlic. Saute gently for 3 minutes, but do not let vegetables brown. Add a dozen cut up cherrystone clams with their liquor or a No. 1 can of minced clams and cook for a few more minutes. Now add 3 cups of light cream, season with salt, pepper and a touch of cayenne. Bring to the boiling point and add 1 dozen oysters with their liquor, plus 2 tablespoons of chopped parsley, 2 tablespoons of butter and a pinch of dried thyme. Simmer till oysters are plump and curly. Serve in deep bowls with oyster crackers. If you like you can top with salted whipped cream. This will serve 4-6.

Union Probe At Standstill

A proposed study of civic amalgamation is at a standstill awaiting for a report from the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Donald Smith, chairman of the senior chamber civic affairs group, told chamber directors yesterday.

The Jaycees have been asked to share equally the $5,000 estimated cost of the survey with the senior group.

Planning Budget Remains $20,000

Municipalities in the capital city area will be asked to give the same amount as last year for the Capital Region Planning Board's 1955 budget.

The budget, which is unchanged at $20,000, was made up last year by a $10,000 grant from the provincial government with Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich, Esquimalt and Central Saanich paying sums in relation to their population.

Thief Takes Traffic Sign

Theft of a traffic sign could lead to a serious accident, Saanich police said last night.

Someone stole a 30-mile-per-hour sign from Shelbourne street near Hillside.

A policeman pointing out that the act could mean loss of life in a traffic accident, said, "It was a stupid thing."

New Princess Scheduled In B.C. Waters by May

Grown from a 30-foot section of keel six months ago, the 7,000-ton CPR ferry Princess of Vancouver will be launched at Glasgow shortly and will probably be in B.C. waters by May.

Designed for Nanaimo-Vancouver service, the vessel is being built under cover to avoid weather delay.

Huge sections of her hull and decks are being welded in shops at the shipyards of Alexander Stephen & Sons Limited, and are then lifted by crane to the slipway to be fitted in position.

Supervising is D. B. Prentice of Victoria, superintendent engineer of the B.C. Coastal service of the CPR, together with officials of Lloyds and the British transport ministry.

The single-funnel ship will carry 800 passengers and 28 box cars or 115 autos. With a service speed of 15½ knots, she will be able to make three round trips a day.

'King of the Safecrackers'

First Blast Almost Ends New Career

(The author, a Canadian who from being a minister of the Gospel became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, now lives quietly, having paid for his years of wrongdoing, right among us on Vancouver Island. He was not alone as a criminal, and yesterday's chapter told of the people he gathered about him to make up his very special mob.)

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

(Copyright, Canada 1955, by Herbert Emerson Wilson and The Daily Colonist.)

I had my mob lined up. I was almost ready to hit the first mark—but not quite.

Back in Detroit, I rented a house on Cadillac Avenue, bought a secondhand safe for $50 and had it hauled up to my garage.

With the old-time petermen of my mob advising me, I began experimenting on that safe with my father's nitroglycerin formula. This proved to be touchy work, for I had no idea how much of the stuff to use. I learned later that different quantities of soup had to be used on different makes of safe, even if they were the same size and weight.

After a month or two, the old safe was almost unrecognizable and I had enough confidence in my new career to make a start.

That start was almost my finish, too.

Just for a test, Lou, Cox and I tackled the safe in a small dairy not far from the house we'd rented.

Apparently I used just a touch too much soup on the small safe, and next thing we knew all the glass partitions in the dairy came down arounud us in a tinkling crash.

We left promptly and without a cent—and my brother Lou was inclined to be a bit sarcastic about the whole thing.

Our next score proved a different story—perhaps because we applied to it all our knowledge and experience, and pulled it off in a style that was painstaking, exact in detail and, evidently, unique with my mob.

Our mark this time was a big downtown Detroit department store. Herb Cox had given it a preliminary casing, and assured me it would be easy. We set to work.

Herb got a job as an electrician in the store, and within a few days was able to tell me all about the 25 burglar-alarm bells guarding the place. Lou and Doc Redding paid daily shopping and change-making visits to the store, keeping their eyes open and asking casual questions around the cashier's office. It's astonishing how careless some people are.

Herb learned the name of the night watchman, and Lou paid him a visit, posing as an information gatherer for the city directory. Lou, of course, knew what questions to ask and comments to make, and in no time had the watchman telling him just how he worked—that he, for example, had to ring in his time boxes every hour on the half-hour, while the beat cop dropped in every hour on the hour.

For two more weeks after Lou's talk with the watchman, we cased the store thoroughly, by day and night. Then we held a dress rehearsal, complete with a stop watch and test of the getaway route—everything, that is, but the actual score.

Next night we struck.

Gun Is Our Key

At five minutes to one in the morning, Lou was crouched in a darkened doorway. Along came the beat cop and, before he could get his hands out of his pockets (it was bitterly cold) to ring the night bell, Lou had a gun in his back.

The cop, no fool, obeyed Lou's orders, rang the bell and told the watchman he was coming in with a friend.

Down the street Herb Cox, de la Pena and I were watching from a darkened car. As Lou made his move, we pulled up and, leaving Dave outside, Herb and I moved into the store with Lou and the cop.

Moving fast, we fronted the watchman before he could open his mouth. By 1 a.m. the cop, under Lou's gun, was making his routine check-in phone call, the watchman was handcuffed to a big chair, Herb was breaking the alarm circuit surrounding the safe, and I was getting out my tool-bag, and pulling on a pair of gloves.

This safe posed no big problem. There was felt padding between the door and the jamb, which I ate out with a syringeful of sulphuric acid.

Then Herb and I kneaded brown soap to a doughy consistency, and stuffed it like putty into the chinks.

In the soap, midway of the cracks at top and bottom of the safe door, I carved hollows about an inch deep and two inches long. From the rubber cork of the rubber nitroglycerin bag strapped to my shoulder I extracted about half an ounce of soup with a hypo.

With Herb watching the bottom cup, I let this go, drop by drop, into the top soap cup. In a minute or two he whispered "Hold it. It's hit bottom."

He flattened the bottom cup to keep the soup from running out, and after applying a detonator cap I did the same to the top. From the cap wires I ran about 20 feet of extension wire to the other side of the room.

From our bags we got two old-fashioned comforters; soaked them under a tap, and wrapped them around the safe.

We were almost ready for the blow—but first had to make sure there would be no interruptions from the outside.

(To Be Continued)

Week-Long 'War' Ends

Final assault by government troops yesterday virtually ended the fighting in Costa Rica. Loyalists captured the last two rebel bases in the north and claimed to have caught "a fat fish"—perhaps Capt. Teodor Picado, Jr., son of an exiled ex-president and second-in-command of the rebels. Top photo shows National Guardsmen setting up machine-gun position. Lower picture shows government troops resting after battle.

Canada To Start Flights On Polar Route to Europe

Will Shorten Trip By 1,000 Miles

Canada's first trans-polar air service will be in operation early in May.

The federal government has approved Canadian Pacific Airlines' application to route mail and passenger flights from Vancouver to Amsterdam, over the top of the world.

G. W. G. McConachie, president of the CPA, made the announcement last night.

"We are delighted that the cabinet has recognized the significance of this newest travel route to Europe," he said.

"We are fully aware of the responsibility involved in developing this important and strategic service for Canada."

RANK WITH BEST

"We propose," he added, "to devote our best efforts toward providing a high standard of operation that will reflect credit on this country and will compare favorably with any other in the world."

Simultaneously with the CPA announcement, came a statement from Transport Minister Marler.

The proposed route, he said, would cut by about 1,000 miles the regular flying distance between Vancouver and Europe.

CPA is not the pioneer of the route. Scandinavian Airlines recently started a flight schedule between Copenhagen and Los Angeles, by way of Winnipeg.

FORMAL APPROVAL

Only formality in the way of a license for CPA now is approval by the air transport board at Ottawa.

The 4,825-mile polar route from Vancouver to The Netherlands is expected to be flown in two stages, with a refueling stop at a Greenland base.

CPA says that at no time during the 17 hours of flying time required for the voyage would the airliners be more than 90 minutes from one or another of a chain of northern airports.

SHORTER HOPS

Each of the two non-stop legs will be shorter than the 3-180-mile span between Honolulu and Fiji which CPA flies regularly on its trans-Pacific run.

Amsterdam was chosen as the European terminus because it is equidistant from the principal cities of Europe and passengers in transit do not require customs or immigration clearances.

Initially CPA will schedule only a weekly return flight, leaving Vancouver Friday and arriving at Amsterdam 18 hours and 30 minutes later. A refueling stop might be made at Churchill, Man., if not in Greenland.

GREENLAND STOP

Westbound flights definitely will refuel at Sonderstrom, Greenland, however. These flights will leave Amsterdam Saturday evening, arriving in Vancouver Sunday.

CPA will use Super DC-6B aircraft on this route.

Connections will be made in Vancouver with air services to Australia, New Zealand and the Far East.

There will be first-class and tourist accommodation and services, with "epicure meals" for the more expensive passage.

Desperate Convicts Surrender Meekly

BOSTON (AP)—Four long-term convicts, who held five guards hostage in Massachusetts state prison for 3½ days in a desperate try for freedom, surrendered meekly Friday to a seven-man civilian committee.

The committee, through its spokesman, Erwin D. Canham, editor of The Christian Science Monitor, said no "bargain or deal" was made.

The convicts were promised only that everything will be done to work with state officials "to get something so that these convicts would have some hope for the future."

The four, who had offered to trade the lives of their hostages for a getaway car and a clear path to freedom, gave up their pistols and knives and released the guards and six other prisoners who were held against their wishes in the solitary cell block of the antiquated 150-year-old prison. None were harmed.

The men are Theodore (Teddy) Green, bank robber and jail breaker; Walter Balben, robber-gunman; rapist Joseph Flaherty, and police killer Fritz Swenson. The hostages were served hot meals daily with the acquiescence of their captors. The prisoners themselves had a limited amount of food in the solitary cell block kitchen. The siege ended just short of 82 hours.

The outburst started early Tuesday when the four convicts sawed their way out of their cells and seized the guards after failing to escape with the aid of a makeshift ladder.

The rebels made things quite comfortable for the committee during the negotiations. Canham said when the committee members arrived at the cell block where the convicts were holed, "We found a most amazing scene—11 chairs in a neat circle with a table in the centre and a pad and pencils—facilities for a well-organized conference."

Then tenseness of the situation was graphically summed up by Canham as he described the exact moment of the disarming.

"Until the precise moment when they pulled their guns from their dungarees pockets and tossed them on the table before us, we did not know whether the men would choose tragedy or hope.

"We had talked, back and forth, for some six hours to try and bring them to choose hope."

Government Fumbles One?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Directors of the Vancouver Tourist Association are convinced the provincial government has fumbled one.

Object of their scorn is the 1955 B.C. license plate which replaces steel tabs issued for several years. The 1955 plate is an indeterminate yellow, according to some members, lacking symbol or slogan.

Tiny Bodies Found, Woman Charged

EDMONTON (CP)—Charges of manslaughter and infanticide were laid Friday against an Edmonton woman following discovery of two babies' bodies in the cellar of a downtown rooming house. Police said the babies had been dead for five or six years.

Anne Drobot, also known as Anne Devon, appeared in court on the charges and was remanded without plea to Jan. 27.

The rooming house landlady found the two bodies in a cardboard box. Police said both infants apparently died soon after birth.

Police said one child was believed born between February and August, 1948, and the other between August and November, 1949. They said the manslaughter charge was laid in connection with the death of the first baby and the infanticide charge in connection with the death of the other. Infanticide carries a maximum penalty of three years.

An autopsy will determine the cause of death.

Police said Miss Drobot has an eight-month-old child who has been placed in a home.

Aircraft Carriers Head for Formosa

TAIPEI, Saturday (UP) — Three U.S. aircraft carriers were reported steaming today toward the Formosa area, where Nationalist and Communist forces were battling along a 300-mile stretch of Chinese coastal waters.

The 33,100-ton Essex, Kearsarge and Yorktown, each fitted to carry 100 planes, left Manila on the way to "exercises" in this trouble zone.

The report followed the disclosure that American advisers had left the invasion-threatened Tachens, at the north end of the battle line. High sources reported the Nationalists might abandon the strategic islands as indefensible with out U.S. air and naval support.

The U.S. officers and men narrowly escaped death by Communist bombs on their way to Formosa after a "difficult" withdrawal from Tachen Island at night aboard a junk to a waiting warship.

The Nationalist air force reported it sank two Communist gunboats, destroyed 20 other vessels and damaged another 40 in sweeping raids all along the coast Friday.

INVASION FORCES MASS

Communist bombers swept at will over Tachen, dropping leaflets calling for "surrender or death." Invasion forces were massed both north and south of the island cluster.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek called his aides into emergency conferences on the fate of the Nationalist outpost islands along the coast.

Gen. William Chase, chief of the military advisory mission, met with Nationalist defense authorities and with U.S. ambassador Karl Rankin. Rear Admiral Roscoe Goode, U.S. deputy chief of naval logistics, talked for hours with Chiang.

Red China reported that Nationalist and "U.S." planes (the Nationalists fly many American-made planes) raided the mainland port city of Foochow Thursday, killing 120 civilians and destroying many houses.

A high American source suggested that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's regime had approached U.S. authorities in Washington about the evacuation of the Tachens.

FIGHT TO END

However, a Nationalist military spokesman said there was no plan to evacuate any island outposts. He added the Nationalists would fight to the last man on each, as they did on tiny Yikiangshan, just north of Tachen.

The high U.S. source said the Nationalists had renewed here their desperate appeals that American sea-air forces go to the defense of the Tachens.

The source sketched a gloomy picture of the Tachens situation, and voiced doubt that the 10,000-man Nationalist garrison could hold the islands against overwhelming Communist air power.

Ford Talks Continuing

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiators for Ford of Canada and United Automobile Workers' Union (CIO-CCL) adjourned their strike-settlement talks Friday night until this afternoon.

Both sides declined comment on the 2½-hour meeting in a hotel conference room.

Chisholm's Views on Faith Stir Up New Tempest

BY R. O. MARRION

Comments of Dr. Brock Chisholm on recent BBC talks in which existence of God has been denied, and which have started a religious controversy in Britain, last night put him in the centre of a local storm.

Dr. Chisholm, psychiatrist and former head of the World Health Organization, now living at Otter Point, was quoted yesterday as saying belief in God under present doctrinal concepts is "irrational."

Later, he denied that this had been the intent of his remarks.

"I said that people who have one faith tend to regard other faiths as irrational," he said. "Faith and rationality are in different fields.

"It isn't possible to examine the validity of a faith by a rational approach, because they are in different fields.

"A faith is called a faith when it is independent of rational approach, which is not to say that any faith is irrational."

(Dean P. R. Beattie of Christ Church Cathedral characterized this as "a Brock Chisholm definition.")

Dr. Chisholm said that mixing faith with an intellectual approach to religion generally was bound to make personality difficulties.

For sound emotional development, he said, a knowledge of all the major religions was necessary, or at least a knowledge of their "valid existence."

He added later, "I do believe children should be taught of the existence of a variety of different religions, so that they may understand how people behave all over the world."

Dr. Chisholm said that in today's society, religion was of a cultural importance and children could not develop to fit into this society without roots in religion.

The doctor also said that over the centuries the concept of God has been translated in line with "the people's own attitude." The retranslation of the role of God fell to the prophets, "of whom Christ was the greatest," he said.

DR. BROCK CHISHOLM
. . . Two Different Fields

Dean Beattie, as well as arguing that Dr. Chisholm was basing his views on his own definitions of faith and rationality, also took issue with the doctor's opinion that children should be taught about other religions.

"By the same token doctors would study what witch doctors do, in order to practice scientific medicine," he said.

Dean Beattie added that he didn't know what good it would do children to know such things as animism.

"If you have a refrigerator you don't need a root cellar," he declared.

Rev. W. W. McPherson of Oak Bay United Church took a different view of children learning about other religions, siding more with Dr. Chisholm. He said he thought children who were of mature mind should study other religions so they could understand the ways of other people, "but not in their early years when they are impressionable."

"Christianity has nothing to lose by comparison," Dr. McPherson said.

Rev. J. E. Smith of Emmanuel Baptist Church said some of the finest theologians of modern times favored a rational approach to religion.

"I don't think Dr. Chisholm's statements will hurt the faith too much," he said. "He can't even destroy Santa Claus. How can he destroy God?"

Mr. Smith quoted from C. S. Lewis that "the finest piece of scientific reasoning is caused in just the same irrational way as the thoughts a man has because a bit of bone is pressing on his brain."

"Really," Mr. Smith said, "Dr. Chisholm's rationality seems no saner or sounder than the rational ideas of the supernaturalist who worships God as a personal power outside of nature."

Eskimo Hunters Back After Ice Pack Ordeal

OTTAWA (CP)—Nine Eskimo seal hunters, hope for their survival all but given up, have returned safely to their village 17 days after they were marooned on an ice pack in cold, foggy Hudson Bay.

The men returned to their families Thursday night, only hours after the RCAF, with RCMP approval, had called a halt to an aerial search that had failed to turn up a trace of the hunters.

The Eskimos, cast adrift Jan. 4 when a chunk of shore ice broke away as they hunted off Cape Smith Island, close to the bay's northeastern coast, apparently were still in good shape after days of exposure to bitter wind and temperatures ranging to 30 below.

RCAF search and rescue headquarters at Halifax, which had sent three planes to search for the marooned hunters, received the first message that the men "walked home" to Povungnituk, their village.

A similar message from RCMP Constable J. E. Decker at Port Harrison, Que., reached Supt. H. A. Larsen of the RCMP here a short time later.

Supt. Larsen, a veteran of the north who skippered the RCMP ship St. Roch on its Northwest Passage voyages, radioed back for more details on how the men survived on an ice pack believed only about four inches thick.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

WE stood in one of those bay-window offices of the Belmont Building, above the harbor and the streets.

"Bet I could do twice the work, in a glass tower in the sky like this," I said. What a bright change it was from four blank walls and clacking teletype machines.

Here, a man could look beyond his typewriter at gulls, ships, cars, people, green grass and buildings, and the sea.

"It's a fine view," I said.

"Yes," acknowledged my friend, "it's too bad to waste it on civil servants." He is a civil servant himself.

* * *

True enough, I said. Civil servants would be too busy to look at it.

Not always, my friend replied. Although civil servants were an industrious bunch, he was forced to admit that they stole a look out the window now and then.

"How do you suppose the masters of the CPR and Black Ball vessels could get out of the harbor, if they didn't have us to help them?" he demanded.

And he introduced me to a colleague of his in an adjoining office, who does most of the pilotage work for the Belmont Building, with the able assistance of several others.

* * *

As luck would have it, this man was directing a ship out of the harbor at that very moment.

"Put your helm hard to starboard," he snapped, taking in the situation at a glance without stirring from his desk. It was a tense moment.

"No, no, you fool, I didn't say FULL astern," he said, half-rising from his chair. Look out, look OUT! You'll ram the dock."

"Must be difficult for him to hear the orders, through a wall and 300 yards of empty air," I said. But my friend was too preoccupied to pay any attention.

"Hard over, hard over," he shouted. "Thank goodness, he's done it." He mopped his brow. "Phew," he said. "That was touch and go for a while."

* * *

"I suppose you civil servants handle the bulk of this remote-control pilotage work," I said.

"Oh, no, the boys in the commercial offices, and the staff and guests at the Empress Hotel give us some useful help," he said. "Easy, now, mister. Just ease her around a couple of points, and then that so'west wind will catch her in the quarter, and swing her the rest of the way. That's the style, now."

His cold grey eyes, the eyes of a man accustomed to looking into great distances, followed the ship as she lumbered from the harbor.

"Neat work," he observed, "if I do say so myself."

Then he scooped a file from the "pending" basket, and turned his cold grey eyes on that.

* * *

"What about that Chinook fiasco?" I demanded shrewdly. "The time she ran aground?"

"We're holding a court of inquiry on that in coffee break tomorrow," he said. "But I'm in the clear. It's the boss's responsibility, not mine."

"What's your appointment?"

He brought down an old peaked cap from a peg. It had a cardboard panel on the front of it. Marked upon the cardboard in home-made letters were the words "Assistant Deputy Harbormaster."

Unit To Get New Chief

A new commander of 25 Militia Group in Victoria will be named shortly to replace Brigadier Larry Henderson, who is leaving Victoria for Vancouver to accept a business promotion.

Brigadier Henderson will leave here February 1, but he will continue to return to Victoria once or twice a week to carry out his militia duties until he is replaced.

He was appointed to command the new militia group and promoted from lieutenant colonel to brigadier on November 10 of last year.

Belmont Opened

Students in B.C. are of a higher calibre than anywhere else in Canada, H. L. Campbell, deputy minister of education, said at the opening of the new $534,000 Belmont Junior Senior High School last night.

Mr. Campbell said that more students went on to high school and university in B.C. than in other provinces. "Ours are better than the best and the average is better than the average of the world," he stated.

Among those attending the ceremonies was 87-year-old Robert Whitty, the first student at the old Metchosin School.

Monetary Theories Attacked

Social Credit monetary theories were attacked by Mrs. Percy Rayment at a meeting of the Langford CCF Club.

"When in the hungry '30's Major Douglas appeared before a commission to propose a solution to the conditions which prevailed he was asked to explain how credit issues were to be paid," she said.

"His reply was that it will liquidate itself," Mrs. Rayment continued.

"To anyone who has studied finance, that is a ridiculous statement," she claimed. "Continuous issue of currency to the banks if not redeemed would result eventually in drastic inflation and subsequent national ruin, as was the case in Germany after the First World War," she said.

Motorists in New York state pay more than $410,000,000 a year in automobile insurance premiums.

Is Canada Too Big For Its Breeches? Tory Believes So

OTTAWA (CP) — A Quebec Progressive Conservative Friday suggested that Canada is "getting too big for its breeches" in world affairs.

Leon Balcer (Trois-Rivieres) [illegible] is letting itself be carried away by its ideas of grandeur and whether this might lead the country into economy-draining responsibilities.

He was one of several speakers in the continuing Commons debate on ratification of the Paris agreements for entry of a rearmed West Germany into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The agreements limit German arms and military manpower.

The agreements still must be approved by some NATO members — including Canada — and West Germany before German admittance to the alliance. A vote, originally expected Friday, now is not likely before next week.

NEGATIVE VOTES

Four CCF members have said they will vote against ratification. They are Stanley Knowles, Winnipeg North Centre, who spoke Thursday night; Joseph W. Noseworthy, York South; R. R. Knight, Saskatoon, and H. W. Herridge, Kootenay West. Another member of the party, Alistair Stewart, Winnipeg North, said he will abstain.

The main point advanced by those favoring ratification, including Health Minister Martin, was that the stronger the West is the better able it will be to bargain with the East.

All Liberal, Progressive Conservative and Social Credit [illegible] bate supported ratification.

Band Here Today

The 42-member PPCLI army band from Calgary will arrive in Victoria at 2.30 p.m. today and will be quartered at Work Point Barracks.

The band will give a public concert at Bay Street Armory at 2.30 p.m. Sunday and will play for the Work Point garrison on Monday at 7.30 p.m. in the radar building.

The band will also play at the opening of the provincial legislature next Tuesday.

The army will turn out a 100-man guard for the House opening. It will be commanded by Major R. A. McAlpine of the 4 Light Anti-Aircraft Battery and a troop of four guns under Capt. John Reeves of the 119 Medium Anti-Aircraft Battery will fire a 19-gun salute when the lieutenant-governor arrives at the legislative buildings at 2.45 p.m.

Fraser pleaded guilty to possessing three radios and two electric shavers; Reid to breaking and entering and theft.

About half the stolen loot has been recovered.

Of Chamber of Commerce

Parade Participation By City Firms Aim

The Chamber of Commerce will undertake to organize participation of business firms in Victoria's Empire Day parade.

This decision was made at a meeting of chamber directors yesterday at which they also went on record as favoring the parade date for Saturday, May 21.

Next step will be up to the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association which asked the chamber to organize the parade and to give an opinion on the suggestion of the Saturday date.

It is considered almost certain the parade will be held on the Saturday. If so, it will be the first time the procession has been held on an ordinary business day.

Stores would close by mutual agreement during the time of the parade.

BAND TOGETHER

It was proposed that where it was found too expensive for one firm to enter a float, a group of firms might band together, according to their business or their location.

It was suggested that the parade be organized around some central topic.

The ways and means committee of the chamber was empowered to appoint a sub-committee to develop the chamber's part in the parade.

The chamber will support the application of Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd. to operate a service from Patricia Bay.

It was decided to send a delegation from the chamber to sit in on the public hearing of the Air Transport Board to be held here January 28.

Load Falls, Tie-Up Hits Area Cars

A chain holding a lumber load on the tractor-trailer of John K. Rant, 294 Bessborough, broke at Admirals and Craigflower roads at 3 p.m. yesterday, spilling lumber from the tractor. Traffic was slowed for two hours, RCMP said.

In Oak Bay, the car of Peter Poy, 2516 Douglas, was struck on one fender by a hit-and-run car while parked on Beach Drive.

One man was injured in three city accidents.

Stephen Fairbanks, 3132 Donald, was in good condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital last night after suffering shock and hand injuries when his car collided with a truck driven by Kenneth Gill, 280 Balmoral, at Government and Bay.

Two cars received slight damage in a collision at Yates and Quadra, and a motorist found paint scratches on a fender when he returned to his car, parked on Yates, near Quadra.

Donations to the TB Christmas seal campaign in Greater Victoria have reached $17,156, close to the 1954 total of $17,500, officials of the Soroptimist Club said yesterday.

The 1954 figure, a record, is expected to be surpassed before the drive ends February 28. Contributions may be sent to the Christmas Seal campaign office, Room 14, 749 Broughton.

Check List For Liming

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

One question which seems to bother a lot of novice gardeners is when and how to apply a dressing of lime.

The safest and best way is to have your soil tested, so that you will know for sure just how much lime is required to bring your soil up to average good growing condition. Failing this, it is reasonably safe to give the whole vegetable and flower garden one cupful of ground limestone every third year. Don't go messing around the shrubs, though—there are too many touchy subjects which hate lime among the shrubs.

Even with this normal dressing, however, there are some flowers which bloom better when their beds are limed more often. Here, for quick reference, is a list of the more common lime-lovers for summer display:

Sweet Peas: In addition to the treatment every third year with ground limestone, sweet peas are helped if the site is given a dressing of half a cupful of hydrated lime in March. Use the hydrated rather than the ground limestone in this case, as the pulverized lime rock works too slowly to help the current crop.

Dianthus: Members of this family vary in their lime requirements, but pinks insist on a full cupful of hydrated lime per square yard each spring. Carnations will take about half this amount, and sweet williams can use ¾ cup to advantage.

Canterbury Bells: These are biennials, and remain in the same bed for two years, so use the long-lasting ground limestone, applying one cupful per square yard to the surface and scratching it in before bedding out the plants. The perennial peach-leafed bellflower, campanula persicafolia, will take half this amount, scratched in around the plant every spring.

Mignonette: The commonest causes of failure with this plant are loose soil and lack of lime. Rake in one cupful of hydrated per square yard before sowing, and make the soil very firm.

Gentians: Gentian acaulis often fails for lack of lime, and needs half a cupful of the ground limestone per square yard annually, applied in early spring. Most of the other members of the gentian family are lime-haters.

Iris: The bearded irises are great lime-lovers and can use 1¼ cups of ground limestone per square yard, applied just after flowering. Give the bulbous kinds half a cupful in August.

Gypsophila: Both the annual and perennial kinds require lots of lime. Give the annuals half a cupful of hydrated when preparing the bed, and scratch in a cupful of the ground kind around the perennials.

Scabious: Annual scabious need ¾ cupfuls of hydrated per square yard applied in the spring, while the perennial kind will take the same amount of ground limestone.

Young Driver Really Puts Foot in It

A squad of policemen, called to a Victoria home by reports of a prowler in the basement garage last night, found two surprised young men and their car instead.

John Nillberg, 18, 707 Blanshard, told police he had turned into the driveway of the home of Mrs. Francis Venables, 310 Dallas, to turn his car around, and had stepped on the gas instead of the brake.

The car came to rest shortly after it pushed open the garage doors, and Nillberg and his passenger, Peter Leesman, 18, 1875 Christie Way, were not hurt.

CANADIAN LINE TO FLY TOP-OF-WORLD ROUTE

Week-Long 'War' Ends

Final assault by government troops yesterday virtually ended the fighting in Costa Rica. Loyalists captured the last two rebel bases in the north and claimed to have caught "a fat fish"—perhaps Capt. Teodor Picado, Jr., son of an exiled ex-president and second-in-command of the rebels. Top photo shows National Guardsmen setting up machine-gun position. Lower picture shows government troops resting after battle.

Aircraft Carriers Head for Formosa

TAIPEI, Saturday (UP) — Three U.S. aircraft carriers were reported steaming today toward the Formosa area, where Nationalist and Communist forces were battling along a 300-mile stretch of Chinese coastal waters.

The 33,100-ton Essex, Kearsarge and Yorktown, each fitted to carry 100 planes, left Manila on the way to "exercises" in this trouble zone.

The report followed the disclosure that American advisers had left the invasion-threatened Tachens, at the north end of the battle line. High sources reported the Nationalists might abandon the strategic islands as indefensible without U.S. air and naval support.

The U.S. officers and men narrowly escaped death by Communist bombs on their way to Formosa after a "difficult" withdrawal from Tachen Island at night aboard a junk to a waiting warship.

The Nationalist air force reported it sank two Communist gunboats, destroyed 20 other vessels and damaged another 40 in sweeping raids all along the coast Friday.

Communist bombers swept at will over Tachen, dropping leaflets calling for "surrender or death." Invasion forces were massed both north and south of the island cluster.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek called his aides into emergency conferences on the fate of the Nationalist outpost islands along the coast.

Gen. William Chase, chief of the military advisory mission, met with Nationalist defense authorities and with U.S. ambassador Karl Rankin. Rear Admiral Roscoe Goode, U.S. deputy chief of naval logistics, talked for hours with Chiang.

Red China reported that Nationalist and "U.S." planes (the Nationalists fly many American-made planes) raided the mainland port city of Foochow Thursday, killing 120 civilians and destroying many houses.

A high American source suggested that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's regime had approached U.S. authorities in Washington about the evacuation of the Tachens.

However, a Nationalist military spokesman said there was no plan to evacuate any island outposts. He added the Nationalists would fight to the last man on each, as they did on tiny Yikiangshan, just north of Tachen.

The high U.S. source said the Nationalists had renewed here their desperate appeals that American sea-air forces go to the defense of the Tachens.

The source sketched a gloomy picture of the Tachens situation, and voiced doubt that the 10,000-man Nationalist garrison could hold the islands against overwhelming Communist air power.

Trade Group Picks City

The Pacific Northwest Trade Association will hold its spring conference in Victoria in 1956, Chamber of Commerce directors were informed yesterday. Dates will be May 13 to 15.

To Start In Spring

Distance to Europe Cut by 1,000 Miles

Canada's first trans-polar air service will be in operation early in May.

The federal government has approved Canadian Pacific Airlines' application to route mail and passenger flights from Vancouver to Amsterdam, over the top of the world.

G. W. G. McConachie, president of the CPA, made the announcement last night.

"We are delighted that the cabinet has recognized the significance of this newest travel route to Europe," he said.

"We are fully aware of the responsibility involved in developing this important and strategic service for Canada."

"We propose," he added, "to devote our best efforts toward providing a high standard of operation that will reflect credit on this country and will compare favorably with any other in the world."

Simultaneously with the CPA announcement, came a statement from Transport Minister Marler.

The proposed route, he said, would cut by about 1,000 miles the regular flying distance between Vancouver and Europe.

CPA is not the pioneer of the route. Scandinavian Airlines recently started a flight schedule between Copenhagen and Los Angeles, by way of Winnipeg.

Only formality in the way of a license for CPA now is approval by the air transport board at Ottawa.

The 4,825-mile polar route from Vancouver to The Netherlands is expected to be flown in two stages, with a refueling stop at a Greenland base.

CPA says that at no time during the 17 hours of flying time required for the voyage would the airliners be more than 90 minutes from one or another of a chain of northern airports.

Each of the two non-stop legs will be shorter than the 3-180-mile span between Honolulu and Fiji which CPA flies regularly on its trans-Pacific run.

Amsterdam was chosen as the European terminus because it is equidistant from the principal cities of Europe and passengers in transit do not require customs or immigration clearances.

Initially CPA will schedule only a weekly return flight, leaving Vancouver Friday and arriving at Amsterdam 18 hours and 30 minutes later. A refueling stop might be made at Churchill, Man., if not in Greenland.

Westbound flights definitely will refuel at Sonderstrom, Greenland, however. These flights will leave Amsterdam Saturday evening, arriving in Vancouver Sunday.

CPA will use Super DC-6B aircraft on this route.

Connections will be made in Vancouver with air services to Australia, New Zealand and the Far East.

There will be first-class and tourist accommodation and services, with "epicure meals" for the more expensive passage.

Tiny Bodies Found, Woman Charged

EDMONTON (CP)—Charges of manslaughter and infanticide were laid Friday against an Edmonton woman following discovery of two babies' bodies in the cellar of a downtown rooming house. Police said the babies had been dead for five or six years.

Anne Drobot, also known as Anne Devon, appeared in court on the charges and was remanded without plea to Jan. 27.

The rooming house landlady found the two bodies in a cardboard box. Police said both infants apparently died soon after birth.

Police said one child was believed born between February and August, 1948, and the other between August and November, 1949. They said the manslaughter charge was laid in connection with the death of the first baby and the infanticide charge in connection with the death of the other. Infanticide carries a maximum penalty of three years.

An autopsy will determine the cause of death.

Police said Miss Drobot has an eight-month-old child who has been placed in a home.

Papers Found; Not Money

Personal papers, photographs and two bank books stolen when a Yukon cafe owner lost more than $1,000 cash in Victoria, January 14, were found in a mail box at Pandora and Quadra by a mail collector yesterday. Henry Hoot, Watson Lake, Y.T., was robbed as he dined in the Princess Mary Restaurant.

Guilty of Manslaughter

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—Bushworker John Lecuyer, 26, Friday was found guilty of manslaughter in the beating-death of Helen Rivers, 21. Lecuyer was originally charged with murder but the jury returned a manslaughter verdict.

Fliers Escape Unhurt

HAMILTON (CP)—Two RCAF officers escaped unhurt late Friday when they crash-landed their T-33 jet trainer in a blinding snow storm about five miles north of here. FO. Frank Hawthorn of Brantford, Ont., and his co-pilot, FO. Reg Russell of Toronto, landed their Shooting Star in a snow-covered field.

Three Killed in Crash

WINNIPEG (CP)—The RCAF reported early today that an RCAF twin-engined Expediter airplane had crashed in the Sanford area of southern Manitoba. Three bodies have been recovered.

'King of the Safecrackers'

First Blast Almost Ends New Career

(The author, a Canadian who from being a minister of the Gospel became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, now lives quietly, having paid for his years of wrongdoing, right among us on Vancouver Island. He was not alone as a criminal, and yesterday's chapter told of the people he gathered about him to make up his very special mob.)

I had my mob lined up. I was almost ready to hit the first mark—but not quite.

Back in Detroit, I rented a house on Cadillac Avenue, bought a secondhand safe for $50 and had it hauled up to my garage.

With the old-time petermen of my mob advising me, I began experimenting on that safe with my father's nitroglycerin formula. This proved to be touchy work, for I had no idea how much of the stuff to use. I learned later that different quantities of soup had to be used on different makes of safe, even if they were the same size and weight.

After a month or two, the old safe was almost unrecognizable and I had enough confidence in my new career to make a start.

That start was almost my finish, too.

Just for a test, Lou, Cox and I tackled the safe in a small dairy not far from the house we'd rented.

Apparently I used just a touch too much soup on the small safe, and next thing we knew all the glass partitions in the dairy came down around us in a tinkling crash.

We left promptly and without a cent—and my brother Lou was inclined to be a bit sarcastic about the whole thing.

Our next score proved a different story—perhaps because we applied to it all our knowledge and experience, and pulled it off in a style that was painstaking, exact in detail and, evidently, unique with my mob.

Our mark this time was a big downtown Detroit department store. Herb Cox had given it a preliminary casing, and assured me it would be easy. We set to work.

Herb got a job as an electrician in the store, and within a few days was able to tell me all about the 25 burglar-alarm bells guarding the place. Lou and Doc Redding paid daily shopping and change-making visits to the store, keeping their eyes open and asking casual questions around the cashier's office. It's astonishing how careless some people are.

Herb learned the name of the night watchman, and Lou paid him a visit, posing as an information gatherer for the city directory. Lou, of course, knew what questions to ask and comments to make, and in no time had the watchman telling him just how he worked—that he, for example, had to ring in his time boxes every hour on the half-hour, while the beat cop dropped in every hour on the hour.

For two more weeks after Lou's talk with the watchman, we cased the store thoroughly, by day and night. Then we held a dress rehearsal, complete with a stop watch and test of the get-away route—everything, that is, but the actual score.

Next night we struck.

Gun Is Our Key

At five minutes to one in the morning, Lou was crouched in a darkened doorway. Along came the beat cop and, before he could get his hands out of his pockets (it was bitterly cold) to ring the night bell, Lou had a gun in his back.

The cop, no fool, obeyed Lou's orders, rang the bell and told the watchman he was coming in with a friend.

Down the street Herb Cox, de la Pena and I were watching from a darkened car. As Lou made his move, we pulled up and, leaving Dave outside, Herb and I moved into the store with Lou and the cop.

Moving fast, we fronted the watchman before he could open his mouth. By 1 a.m. the cop, under Lou's gun, was making his routine check-in phone call, the watchman was handcuffed to a big chair, Herb was breaking the alarm circuit surrounding the safe, and I was getting out my tool-bag, and pulling on a pair of gloves.

This safe posed no big problem. There was felt padding between the door and the jamb, which I ate out with a syringeful of sulphuric acid. Then Herb and I kneaded brown soap to a doughy consistency, and stuffed it like putty into the chinks.

In the soap, midway of the cracks at top and bottom of the safe door, I carved hollows about an inch deep and two inches long. From the rubber cork of the rubber nitroglycerin bag strapped to my shoulder I extracted about half an ounce of soup with a hypo.

With Herb watching the bottom cup, I let this go, drop by drop, into the top soap cup. In a minute or two he whispered "Hold it. It's hit bottom."

He flattened the bottom cup to keep the soup from running out, and after applying a detonator cap I did the same to the top. From the cap wires I ran about 20 feet of extension wire to the other side of the room.

From our bags we got two old-fashioned comforters, soaked them under a tap, and wrapped them around the safe.

We were almost ready for the blow—but first had to make sure there would be no interruptions from the outside.

Chisholm's Views on Faith Stir Up New Tempest

BY R. O. MARRION

Comments of Dr. Brock Chisholm on recent BBC talks in which existence of God has been denied, and which have started a religious controversy in Britain, last night put him in the centre of a local storm.

Dr. Chisholm, psychiatrist and former head of the World Health Organization, now living at Otter Point, was quoted yesterday as saying belief in God under present doctrinal concepts is "irrational."

Later, he denied that this had been the intent of his remarks.

"I said that people who have one faith tend to regard other faiths as irrational," he said. "Faith and rationality are in different fields.

"It isn't possible to examine the validity of a faith by a rational approach, because they are in different fields.

"A faith is called a faith when it is independent of rational approach, which is not to say that any faith is irrational."

(Dean P. R. Beattie of Christ Church Cathedral characterized this as "a Brock Chisholm definition.")

Dr. Chisholm said that mixing faith with an intellectual approach to religion generally was bound to make personality difficulties.

For sound emotional development, he said, a knowledge of all the major religions was necessary, or at least a knowledge of their "valid existence."

He added later, "I do believe children should be taught of the existence of a variety of different religions, so that they may understand how people behave all over the world."

Dr. Chisholm said that in today's society, religion was of a cultural importance and children could not develop to fit into this society without roots in religion.

The doctor also said that over the centuries the concept of God has been translated in line with "the people's own attitude." The retranslation of the role of God fell to the prophets, "of whom Christ was the greatest," he said.

Dean Beattie, as well as arguing that Dr. Chisholm was basing his views on his own definitions of faith and rationality, also took issue with the doctor's opinion that children should be taught about other religions.

"By the same token doctors should study what witch doctors do, in order to practice scientific medicine," he said.

Dean Beattie added that he didn't know what good it would do children to know such things as animism.

"If you have a refrigerator you don't need a root cellar," he declared.

Rev. W. W. McPherson of Oak Bay United Church took a different view of children learning about other religions, siding more with Dr. Chisholm. He said he thought children who were of mature mind should study other religions so they could understand the ways of other people, "but not in their early years when they are impressionable."

"Christianity has nothing to lose by comparison," Dr. McPherson said.

Rev. J. E. Smith of Emmanuel Baptist Church said some of the finest theologians of modern times favored a rational approach to religion.

"I don't think Dr. Chisholm's statements will hurt the faith too much," he said. "He can't even destroy Santa Claus. How can he destroy God?"

Mr. Smith quoted from C. S. Lewis that "the finest piece of scientific reasoning is caused in just the same irrational way as the thoughts a man has because a bit of bone is pressing on his brain."

"Really," Mr. Smith said, "Dr. Chisholm's rationality seems no saner or sounder than the rational ideas of the supernaturalist who worships God as a personal power outside of nature."
